Publisher's Notes

By Timothy J. Pade • pade@coloradogolf.com

This edition kicks off the summer season. Finally, we can look forward to warmer temperatures and no snow! While we may have suffered through a cold, wet spring, the good news is that Colorado's golf courses are in tournament condition and waiting for us. We got new grips and started swinging our clubs after watching Adam Scott take the green jacket at the Masters—the first Australian ever to do so—and we are ready to play.

For the past 25 years, Colorado Golf Magazine has provided the most comprehensive coverage of golf in the Centennial State and offered the best deals to our readers. This year is no different. Our 2013 Colorado Golf Pass is chock full of incentives and offers. You can save thousands of dollars off your rounds at the best public facilities in Colorado, and you'll find deals at local restaurants as well. Best of all, the pass is a steal at just $49.95. Some courses even provide added value with complimentary range balls or other enticements, so check out our sampling of participating facilities starting on pg. 53, and then get out there and play.

Of course, the golf lifestyle is not just about what happens on the course. It's also about the style and amenities that come with it. To that end, our writers and editors give you the latest news on fashion, jewelry and, naturally, the top luxury automobiles on the planet. Featured in this issue is the new BMW 650i, a German sports coupe that effortlessly combines power and luxury. Our automotive expert, Aaron Atwood, tells all in his review starting on pg. 44. And Françoise Rhodes, our style diva, delves into the latest colors, fabrics and fashion-forward designs on and off the course so you can stay current and cool as the Colorado summer heats up. Our fashion feature starts on pg. 50.

With a challenging economy the past three years, many private golf clubs have changed their initiation fees and membership structures. As a result, we've made changes to our private club guide to make it even easier for you to find the club that best meets your needs. We work hard to make our listings accurate; however, if you know of changes that are not reflected in our guide, simply email us at maps@coloradogolf.com and we will update the information in our next issue. And if you've been considering joining a club, now is a great time to do so. In many cases, initiation fees can be negotiated, allowing you to enjoy the benefits of belonging to a private club facility but for a lot less than you think.

As always, we sincerely appreciate the support of our subscribers and advertisers. This year is looking like the start of a stronger economy, which will be a boon to the golf industry in our state. And with Colorado hosting the Solheim Cup this summer and the BMW Championships next summer, golf in Colorado will again be front and center on national and international stages. Get ready to enjoy it. Meanwhile, enjoy summer, and we'll see you out there on the course.

She is adorned with a large green ring, a matching earring, and a multi-strand necklace with various colored stones. Her hand is resting near her chin. In the background, a wooden easel is visible, suggesting an artistic or studio setting. The lighting is soft and directional, highlighting the textures of her clothing and jewelry.

Carson Daly

In His Own Voice

The successful TV personality is a low-handicapper

"I'm jealous of my sister," admits Carson Daly with a laugh. As incredulous as this may sound from the popular radio and TV personality, he has good reason. "I'm jealous because she has relocated with her family to a location with over a hundred golf courses and close to our parents. I can easily see myself doing that also," he adds, surely to the delight of his parents, Pattie Daly Caruso and Richard Caruso.

If the name Carson Daly is only vaguely familiar, you aren't in sync with of-the-moment TV. Daly is the former host of MTV's Total Request Live and current host of the wildly successful televised singing competition The Voice. Asestatic and amazed as Daly is with the success of The Voice, it's his long-running late-night show, Last Call with Carson Daly, that's his baby. The show, which premiered in 2002 and airs weeknights at 1:30 a.m., turned Daly into one of the longest tenured hosts in late-night television.

A California native, Daly grew up in Santa Monica. Grateful that his stepfather, Richard, introduced him to the game of golf as a young boy, Daly was truly bit by the golf bug in high school, where he became a star player on the Santa Monica High School golf team. After graduating in 1991, Daly continued to hone his game in the Coachella Valley, after moving there to attend College of the Desert. In fact, there was a time when he had aspirations of becoming a Tour player.

A past winner of the former Bob Hope Chrysler Classic Pro Am, Daly returned to the desert this year for the Humana Challenge Pro Am. He is happy with all of the changes made to the tournament and with the focus on health and wellness. "It was an honor to be asked back by Humana and the Clinton Foundation; being in the desert holds such great memories for me."

Daly with Mother Pattie Daly Caruso and Richard Caruso

"I tried to qualify for the U.S. Open at Ironwood when I was playing well. I had a disastrous hole, and I think that was the turning point for me. I would have tried on the then Nike Tour, probably given it a shot, tried to play a few events, see how it would have gone. I would have like to have done something. But we'll never know."

What we do know is that Daly has worked diligently in the entertainment business and achieved success and popularity. Humble and appreciative of his life, he quips, "I've never had more invites to golf tournaments."

These days, he continues to be passionate about the game and plays as much as possible. "January and February are when I'm able to play the most," he says. "The rest of the year is crazy busy."

Daly at the 2005 Bob Hope Chrysler Classic

Daly believes adamantly that the game of golf helps build strong character. "I like to think I'm a decent person, really, a lot of the things that I learned were from playing the game of golf, so making those correlations between life and golf is very important to do when you're young. You've got to sit back and let somebody else go first sometimes; there are some great lessons in there."

At this time Daly does not belong to a country club, but GMs take note: "I'm open for celebrity memberships from anyone who wants to give me one," Daly laughs. Perhaps his phone is already ringing with offers.

It seems to be a little-known fact that Daly and his father played a lot of junior golf with Earl and Tiger Woods, and that's what comes to mind when the TV star is asked who would make up his ultimate foursome. "I have such great memories of playing golf in my youth; I have to have my dad in there, that's for sure. And I remember playing in a Father/Son tournament with Earl and Tiger. We had so much fun playing junior golf in Southern California, so I'm going to say my dad, Tiger and Earl. Both of our fathers were very instrumental to us on and off the course; I know how much Earl meant to Tiger."

Daly can be found nightly on television and daily on the radio. He's also a founding partner of 456 Entertainment, an independent record label, and hosts the annual special, New Year's Eve with Carson Daly. He and his girlfriend, Siri Pinter, are the proud parents of two children.

The entertainer would be the first one to agree that life is good. With a successful career, a single-digit handicap in golf and the ability to lead life to the fullest, Daly doesn't take more than two seconds to respond when asked to describe his life in one sentence. "I don't know if you can print this, but I'm the luckiest bastard alive!"

America's Rising Stars

By Susanne Kemper

Two of the LPGA's stars to watch

Was 2012 really Alexis Thompson's rookie season? She was 12 in 2007 when she qualified for her first U.S. Women's Open, the youngest player ever to do so. She played 21 Tour events over the next five years, winning the LPGA's Navistar Classic in 2011 to become the youngest winner in LPGA Tour history. After stunning the golfing world with those feats, the talented 16 year-old finally got LPGA Commissioner Mike Whan's approval to join in 2012.

Known as Lexi, the 5' 11" brunette from Florida is currently the youngest LPGA Tour cardholder. She also became the youngest winner on the Ladies European Tour in December 2011 when she topped the leaderboard at the Omega Dubai Masters. She is the epitome of golf's new face—tall, athletic and confident. She's already incredibly accomplished, but she's also still very much a teen. Her recent tweet from Dubai: "Got my first camel ride today on Nadia! So amazing."

She says her best achievements so far are her first win at the Navistar and playing in the Curtis Cup. Open, direct and full of laughter, Thompson has been home schooled all her life. She started playing golf at age five, following in the footsteps of her older brothers Curtis (an LSU team golfer) and Nicolas (a Tour player). Their parents play as well.

Does that make for a pleasant family outing? "No," assures Thompson, "that's never the case. Ever. Always competitive and really intense."

Prodigy pro golfer she may be, but off the course she was a 17-year old looking forward to her prom night last May 18 in Ft. Lauderdale. Through Facebook she invited America's servicemen ages 18 to 20 to send a photo and note about being her prom date. She selected Mark Scott, a Marine.

She loves movies, particularly those with dancing. "I used to dance a lot, a shadow dancer with the mirror or in the shower," she laughs. "I love singing in the shower."

Thompson is very superstitious. She wears ladybug earrings and charms, and don't ask about Friday the 13th or spilling salt. Before her first win at the Navistar, waffles were her go-to meal, prepared by Valerie Perry at the Waffle House. In 2012,

Alexis Thompson

Thompson again had the same meal daily, and Perry didn't take vacation so she could be on the job for the defending champ!

Thompson is clear and philosophical beyond her years. "I'm looking forward to the places I get to see and play," she says. "Getting to experience all this is amazing; hopefully I can win along the way."

Alexis Thompson

Ryann O'Toole

Ryann O'Toole took the college route before turning pro in May 2009, just after graduating from UCLA with a degree in sociology. In 2010, she grabbed two wins on the Symetra Tour. She was also a hit in Golf Channel's "Big Break Sandals Resort Show," which she calls "two weeks of my life that were really life changing."

The 5' 7" California beauty debuted on the LPGA Tour in 2011. "I love all Southern California sports—surfing, wakeboarding, skateboarding and snowboarding are my favorites.

Ryann O'Toole

When I got a scholarship to UCLA, I took their program over USC. I felt a better fit with the coach and the team."

It was during her LPGA rookie year that everything seemed to click. She was honored with a captain's pick for the Solheim Cup, and loved every moment. "It was a huge thrill," she says, "and my best golfing memory. I love the travel, seeing the world and the U.S. Ireland was very special during the Cup."

Being greeted by an elephant at her hotel during this year's Honda LPGA in Thailand was another hit, as was her trip to Australia, where she won. "I'll take my surfboard when I go back next year."

O'Toole loves discovering new places, but the 25-year-old San Clemente resident isn't a party girl. When she's not chilling at home she likes to go out for a drink or to have dinner at a local joint. When it comes to wine she favors Cabs and Malbecs, in beer she likes wheat beer, white ales and IPAs.

In addition to winning golf tournaments, her bucket list includes surfing in Costa Rica, an exciting balloon ride, eating her way through Italy, hiking Machu Picchu and Kilimanjaro, and bathing in an active volcano hot springs.

The Rankings

As of Dec. 10, 2012, this is how the American women stacked up in the Rolex Women's World Golf Rankings

It has been a long drought for U.S. women's golf—18 years since an American, Beth Daniels, won the Player of the Year award. But Stacy Lewis triumphed in 2012 with four wins and 16 top-10 finishes. No, she didn't win a Major; but she did tie for second at the Wegman's LPGA Championship and the Evian Masters (a Major in 2013) and took fourth at the Kraft Nabisco. She's ranked 24th.

Stacy Lewis

"I wanted to end that 18-year trend," emphasized Lewis, now in her fourth year on Tour and ranked No. 3, adding, "I know I haven't played my best golf yet."

At the end of 2012, 31 Americans were in the top 100, but some of the longtime favorites had moved down rather than up. Cristie Kerr, the first American to reach World No.1 in 2010, was ranked 11th with her win at the Lorena Ochoa Invitational, while Paula Creamer lost seven places to finish at No. 12.

Cristie Kerr

Big-hitting Brittany Lincicome couldn't win this year and slid down to 18th. Angela Stanford finished at 20th and Brittany Lang was ranked 27th, up from 32nd. Teen queen and 2007 Kraft winner at 15, Morgan Pressl plummeted from 16th to 38th with only one top-10 finish.

When Michelle Wie graduated from Stanford, speculation was rampant that she would finally play the golf she seemed capable of since bursting onto the global golf scene. But in 2012 she fell from 17th to 56th.

Ranked 74th ending her fourth season, Vicky Hurst is still after her first W. Tall and bubbly 19-year-old Jessica Korda made the biggest move in the 2012 rankings, jumping up a whopping 233 places to 77th. She won the ISPS Australian Women's Open at Royal Melbourne in a grueling six-way play-off that included Lincicome and Lewis.

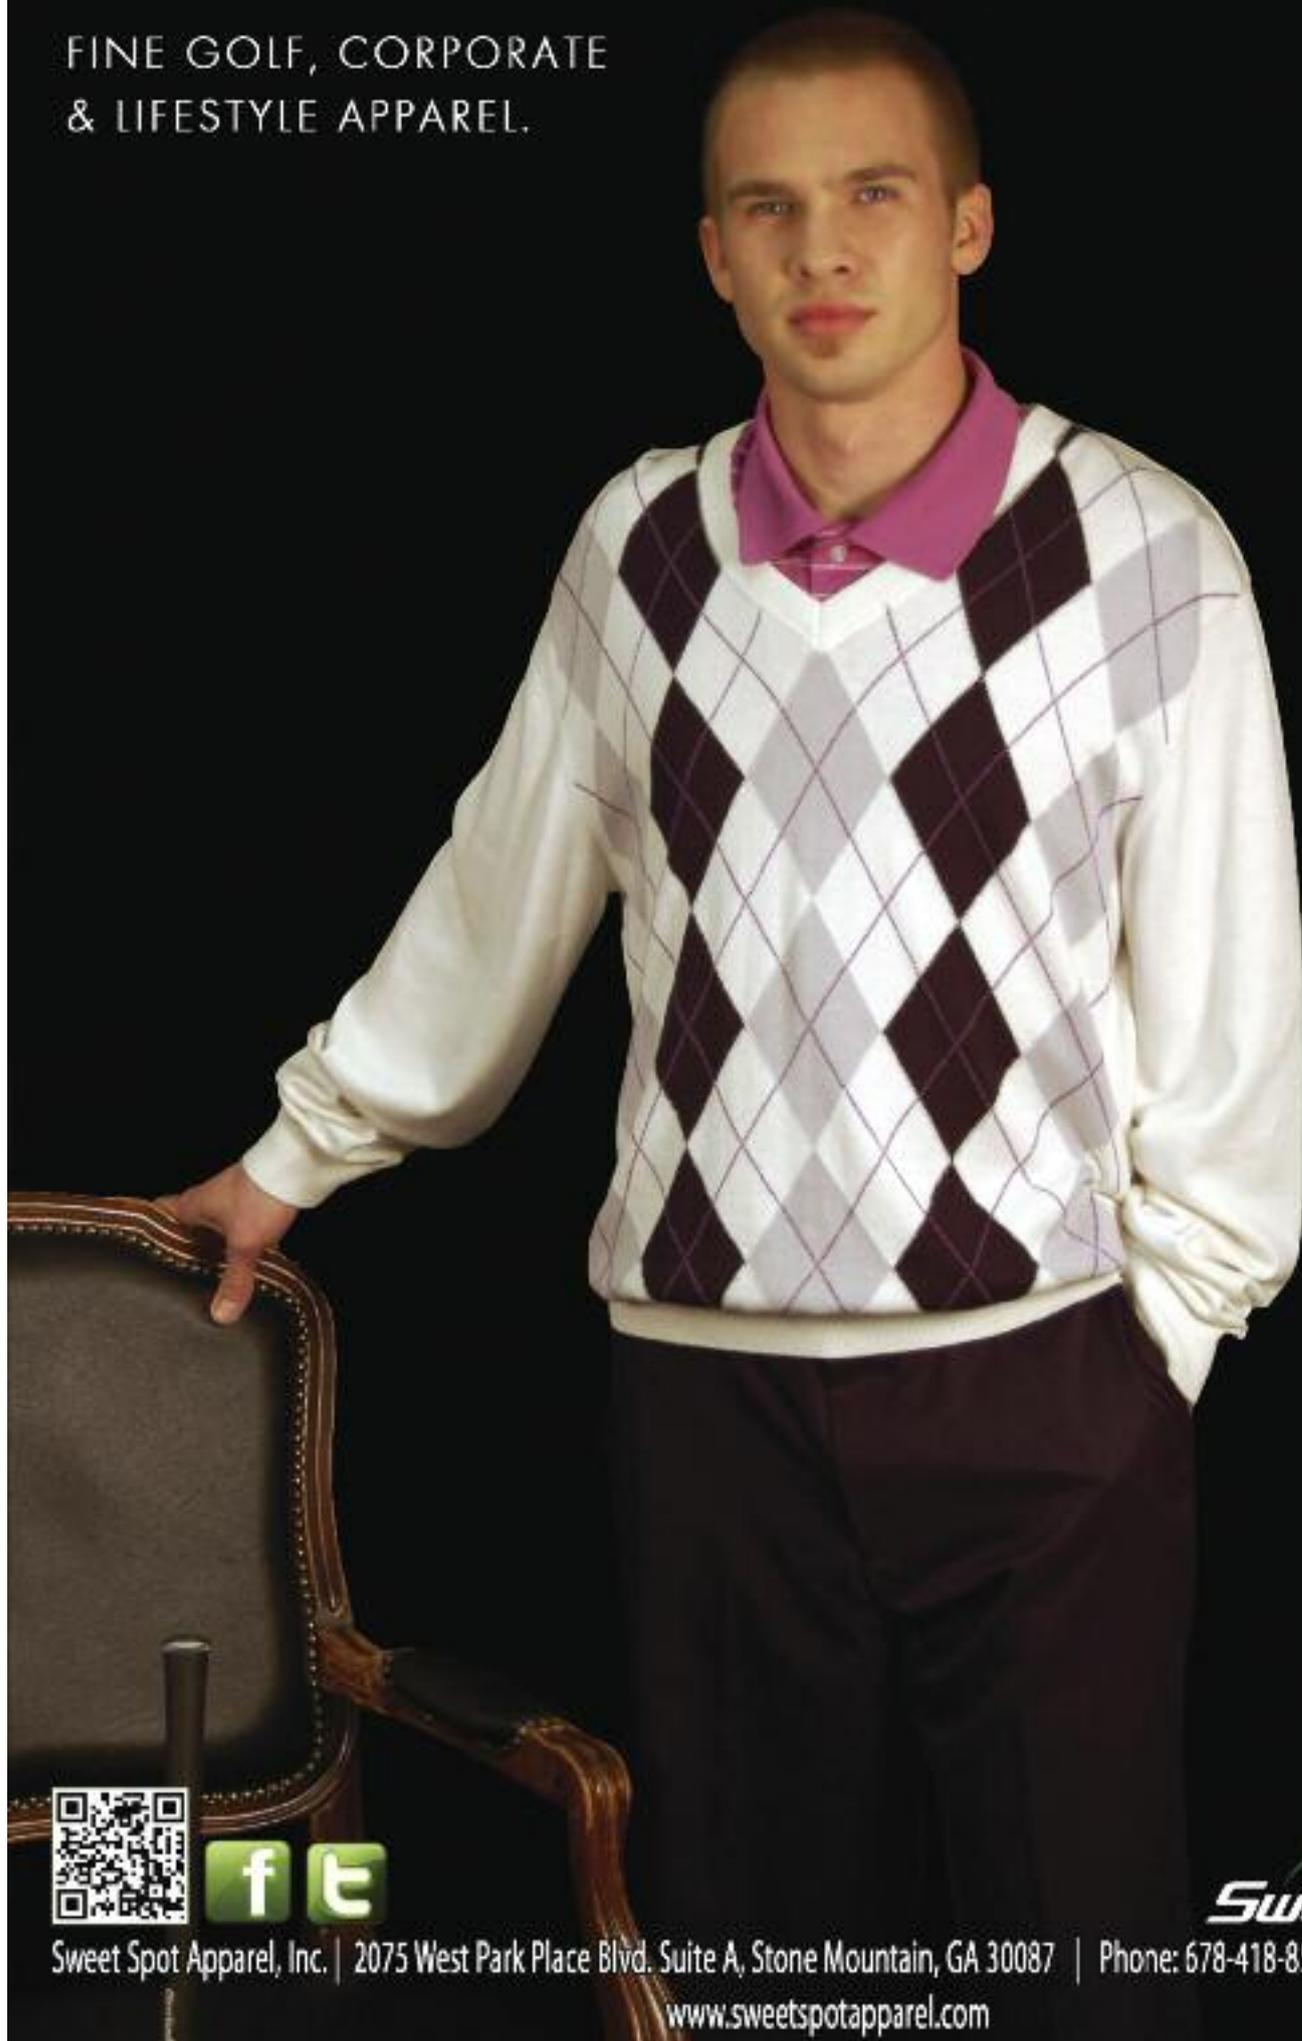

Natalie Gulbis

Watch out for USC star and four-year All American Lizette Salas, who had a superb rookie year in 2012. She's ranked 91st and mentored by her idol, legend Nancy Lopez. Ever-popular Natalie Gulbis slid to 94th, and Pepperdine graduate Danielle Kang had a good rookie season, finishing 105th. Another grad to look for is UCLA's Sydnee Michaels, she ended her rookie season ranked 124th.

America had a surge in 2012. U.S. girls grabbed eight wins, the most by any country. Lewis with her best golf still to play will be difficult to catch, but finally it is "Game On" for America's girls!

River Valley Ranch Golf Club

Brand-new owners, longtime area industry pros, promise impeccable playing conditions and first-class service near Aspen

It's a classic win-win. River Valley Ranch Golf Club's new owners Dave Alvarez and Alden Richards quite literally are living out their ambition to run a first-class golf facility, while players enjoy all the accompanying perks. "This dream of ours has come true," says Richards. "Our 78 years of combined experience—with Dave's private club background and my higher-end, daily-fee side—brings a unique character to being hands-on owners. We'll have great playing conditions and the impeccable service you expect when you come to a golf club." Players will have public-course access with club-level attributes. "I'm excited because there are only two daily-fee courses in Valley, one in Aspen and this one. We're going to be the top golf club on the Western Slope.

"As a 28-year resident in the Roaring Fork Valley, I thought RVR was the best golf club in the area when it was built," says Richards. "The design is user-friendly for all abilities, and the views are second to none with 14,000-foot Mt. Sopris visible from every hole. We'll have the best conditions, the way we want them.

We have added Visage GPS to all carts for the convenience of our players—they won't have to look for yardages, and the GPS shows each hole with front, middle and back tees to help those not familiar with the area or the golf course."

Alvarez and Richards are putting their expertise to good—and speedy—use after acquiring the course for $1.2 million last August. Since then, Richards says they have added another "couple of million" into upgrades such as course-maintenance equipment, restaurant renovations and a top chef to manage food-and-beverage services. Alvarez is a local PGA professional dedicated to top-notch course quality and operations, and Richards, longtime junior-golf coach and executive director of Aspen Junior Golf, assumes the role of director of golf and instruction.

The two partners have been on an ambitious whirlwind of activity to open this season. "Our five-year search for a golf course came to an end when this popped up last April," Richards says. "This is sent from above. We love living in Colorado with the Rocky Mountains, and this is in our own backyard. The transition was tough, but, weather permitting, we plan on an April 1 to mid-April opening. The restaurant is scheduled to open at the end of May." Out-of-towners can look forward to stay-and-play packages with hotels in Aspen and Carbondale. "We're on the Crystal River, great for playing golf and outstanding fly-fishing and hiking and biking."

Although Aspen's junior-golf program leadership has been assumed by Jake Anderson, Richards remains on the board of directors. "I'm just a phone call away from helping him, and I have brought Aspen Junior Golf Satellite to RVR," he says. "We're just 29 miles from Aspen and we'll have an afternoon program here for kids at this end of the Valley." He says RVR will be an integral part of this year's AJG fundraiser with Chris DiMarco on July 15. The course also is scheduled to host the high school regional tournament May 5-6. To contact RVR, call 970.963.3625 or go to RVRGolf.com.

Bear Dance Golf Club

Popular public course continues to waltz off with honors and awards

Bear Dance Golf Club owner Stuart Bruening doesn't need to go into a song-and-dance routine about his renowned course near Larkspur. Its continued popularity speaks for itself, with continued Top 10 listings for best courses to play in the state. Adding to there in our photographs. It's a fantastic piece of property."

Golfers feel like they're virtually the only ones on the course. Bruening says, "It's not in a housing development, but a conservation area with trees separating each hole. You'll never be swallowed up by homes. And the wildlife experience is wonderful with tons of elk and deer and bears, too, in season."

There's more to the venue than just the course, Bruening says. "We've got a wonderful staff and great service. Mark Pfingston, our head pro, food-and-beverage manager Michel Autret and greens superintendant Dave Cahalane all have been here since we opened 11 years ago, all its intrigue, the venue is a study in dichotomy. "The course is challenging but fair, and golfers feel like they've been at a private club although it's public," says Bruening. "You can have the unique experience of a real mountain feel in the Front Range—without having to drive through the mountains."

Open since 2002, Ponderosa pines and elevation changes are key components to the beauty and playability of Bear Dance. Is there a signature hole? "I'm the builder here," says Bruening, part of the design team that included PGA members Corey Aurand, Dennis Hogan and Brian Whitcomb. "If we've got one signature hole, that means we've got 17 mediocre ones," he says with a laugh. "But the sixth hole features our logo bear paw in the bunkers, and the 16th is a very elevated Par 4. When you get to the top you're at 7,000 feet and can see Pike's Peak. People comment on that one." He adds, "People used to say our greens were too tough, but they have been modified and are not nearly as challenging." As far as views and aesthetic appeal: "We use every hole out with a great level of expertise." Bear Dance also is the site of Colorado Section PGA offices. "We're in between Colorado Springs and Denver, where most of the golf professionals are working, so it's convenient for meetings. It's worked out great for them hanging their name on our building, and great for our tag also." Golfers can see memorabilia depicting the history of the PGA in Colorado in the clubhouse lobby.

With full dining services, Bear Dance is a destination spot for both a night out and special events. Lunch is served daily, with dinner every Thursday, Friday and Saturday. "Our chef has been here for seven years and creates wonderful food," says Bruening. "We have theme nights, such as Australian or Pacific Rim dishes." Reservations are strongly suggested on Friday and Saturday nights, and warm weather begs a meal outside anytime. "The patio overlooks the putting green and first tee, along with Hunt Mountain and Raspberry Butte."

Teetimes can be reserved up to seven days in advance at BearDanceGolf.com. "The lowest advance rate you'll find anywhere," says Bruening. By Mike Conrad

This column is brought to you by the letter S! With spring in the air, we're highlighting shirts, a new way to share your best Tiger Woods video game score, sound and a smartphone-friendly swing tool.

AUR Classic Pique Polo shirt

As the weather starts to heat up, be ready to look good and stay cool with the AUR Classic Pique Polo shirt. The AUR Active, designed with the golf swing in mind, is made to keep players cool and comfortable. It's lightweight and allows for a free, full swing, all the while maintaining its stylish looks thanks to synthetic fibers that are crease resistant and quick drying. This shirt will keep its shape all season long. The C327 AUR Dri-Max Classic Pique Polo is available for men, and the C3120 polo for women comes in two styles, short-sleeved and sleeveless. All are available in multiple colors. AUR's philosophy has always been providing the most value-added, aspiring golf fashion on the market. aurgolf.com

HD PVR 2 Gaming Edition

One of my favorite video games is about to get its yearly update: Tiger Woods Golf by EA Sports. I've spent countless hours perfecting my game on Xbox, and unlike in real golf, I have had several holes-in-one on this system. Of course, it always happens when I am alone. Well the folks at Hauppauge have helped me share my success with my friends. The HD PVR 2 Gaming Edition can record high-definition video from my Xbox360 (PS3 or computer), which can then be easily shared on YouTube. Or you can create your own live-streaming channel. The cool thing is you can do this while playing and have no delay at all using the video-pass-through setting! Play your favorite game and share or review your best footage. A record button on top of the unit makes it easy to start and stop your recording. I envision a contest down the line to see who gets the first hole-in-one on Tiger Woods 14!! Check out all the specs at hauppauge.com

Bluetooth Sound Bar

The Pyle Audio 300 Watt Bluetooth Sound Bar is so cool that I had about 10 minutes to test it myself. After my 10 minutes of testing, I took a break, went upstairs and when I came down it was off the counter and in my 18-year-old son's room blasting away! This is a sound bar with built in FM tuner, able to read media through a USB or SD cards in addition to the standard audio RCA inputs. The USB and SD card input reads MP3 files as well as WMA format. You can also stream audio from any device with Bluetooth. This unit sounds great and delivers clear, crisp audio. The 300 watts of power and 8 Ohm subwoofer mean it can crank. Visit pyleaudio.com for all the technical specs.

Divoom Bluetune-solo

Another great little Bluetooth speaker is the Divoom Bluetune-solo. This is a portable Bluetooth speaker that you can take with you anywhere for great sound. What makes it unique is a built-in microphone, so you can use the device for conference calls or to take a call while listening to your favorite music. With just a touch of a button, the speaker becomes a two-way speakerphone. This small speaker (60mm round x 72mm high) puts out some great audio. I was actually shocked by how powerful this little six-watt speaker is. I can already see this sitting by the side of my pool this summer. Want more power? You can daisy chain additional Bluetune-solos to give you bigger sound. Probably the best feature is that it's rechargeable, which means you don't have to take a plug with you. Bluetooth connects from up to 30 feet away, making it perfect for on the patio or poolside, and it comes in a wide range of colors. divoomusa.com

SwingTIP

The SwingTIP is a golf-training tool designed to give you real-time feedback on your smartphone. SwingTIP clips onto your club and shows you what happened with your swing, why it happened and how to fix it. Because it weighs less than an ounce, most people can't even feel it on their club. Just turn it on, start up your mobile app and swing your club; the SwingTIP does the rest, providing instant feedback so you can correct any problems. swingtip.com

Golf season is here, so be on the lookout for more cool golf gadgets to come! Meanwhile, hit 'em long and straight!

How to Use Goal Setting To Become a Better Golfer

It's not enough just to practice—you have to practice effectively

By Lynn Beasley, Psy.D. (C), CSCS

Individuals are not born experts in their area of interest. It takes many years and thousands of hours of deliberate practice for a person to become an expert in a given area, be it music, sports or any other category.

When an individual is first learning a new skill, the step-by-step instructions of how to perform that skill are kept in the working memory. Once a person has become proficient at the task, the information becomes procedural as opposed to declarative, meaning the performance becomes automatic.

Research suggests that high-level athletes have better recollection of their performance, as well as details about the environment. Novice athletes, on the other hand, have a better recollection of the step-by-step mechanical procedure they used to execute the skill. This speaks to the fact that the expert golfer is not using working memory; rather, he or she is performing the skill automatically and thus has the ability to pay attention to other stimuli and environmental cues without a decrease in performance of the primary task, and to adapt to different conditions when necessary—skills professional players must have.

The key to becoming an expert in golf, or any other desired domain, is deliberate practice. It has been documented that it takes approximately 10,000 hours of deliberate practice for anyone to become an expert in anything and move from using the working memory to the procedural memory. “Deliberate” is the key word here. Practicing without purpose will not develop the memory needed to encode the necessary motor programs to become an expert golfer.

One way to make practice deliberate is by goal setting, a terrific mental skill that can be used to improve your practice, increase motivation and focus and help you develop the desired motor programs to become an expert golfer, at whatever level of expertise is right for you.

The key is to set clear objectives and define the level of intensity necessary to achieve those objectives. When we fulfill a goal, we feel a sense of achievement; but if the goal isn't met, we may feel a sense of failure. That's why the process of goal setting is so important.

Here are some basic guidelines to follow for setting appropriate goals.

- Make goals specific and attainable. A vague goal (e.g., I want to get better) will not help you. Goals should be as specific as possible. Typically what golfers desire is to play better, lower their handicap, hit the ball farther, be a more consistent putter and improve other skills. But simply stating that you want to be better and then going to the practice range to hit a bucket of balls will not correlate to improved abilities. Instead, you have to set attainable goals that will result in improvement in these areas. A good practice goal, for example, might be to start every practice having to make five 10-foot putts in a row before hitting any balls on the range. Not only is this a concise goal, it's easy to measure improvement and success.

- Find the right level of challenge for you. Goals should not be so challenging that they are unattainable; however, if a goal is too easy it will not motivate you and your performance will suffer.

- The goal should be within your control. For example, winning is not always within your control regardless of your execution. An opponent's game and environmental variables are outside of your control. The only thing you can control is your own personal performance.

- The goal should reflect what you want to achieve, not someone else's goals.

- The goal should be measurable. Measuring progress will help keep you motivated to achieve your goals. For example, one of your goals might be increased focus on a specific swing-thought. To measure how well you are achieving that on the golf course, take a second score card with you and score yourself on your level of commitment. Use a scale of 1 (not committed at all; many other thoughts enter your mind) to 5 (completely committed) to score your chosen swing-thought for the day. Remember, you're not scoring the result of the shots. The more 4s and 5s you start to see on your scorecard, the better your actual golf scores will likely become.

- Every practice or training session should include small goals that build toward the greater goal. One example of this might be how you approach your warm-up before teeing off. You could commit to spending at least the last 10 minutes of your warm-up going through your pre-shot routine for each ball you hit on the practice range, changing your target or club with each shot. That smaller goal helps you achieve larger goals on the course.

Learning how to effectively use goal setting is an excellent way to improve your deliberate practice procedures, which will ultimately help you achieve your desired level of expert performance.

BMW650i

By Aaron Atwood

BMW 650i

Luxury and power in one beautiful package

In this day and age you can have it all. That must have been what designers were thinking when they went to the drawing board for the BMW 650i. Take a look at the styling and power and you'll find that the best of BMW's brawn has been combined with the supple elegance.

The higher-ups in Germany are calling the 650i a coupe in the sense that it isn't a sedan, though it has four doors. They are suggesting that there's more to this machine than meets the eye, and they're right. The exterior lines are both aggressive and reserved. There's a Mohammad Ali meets Grace Kelly factor going on here. You know there's power and you can't wait to take her out on the town.

It may sound odd to say, but the first features you'll notice in the 650i are the seats. Yes, the place where you first interact with the option) you'll be staring at 60 from a standstill in 4.3 seconds. The twin turbo V-8 engine has enough power to hold its own among the big names in the class, and the 455 horsepower will have you looking for opportunities to punch it. You could stand the 650i up against the Jag XK or Porsche Panamera and it will easily win several rounds—perhaps the whole bout, depending on the judges.

In the luxury division, the 650i is every bit the equal to the Mercedes CLS or Jaguar. The Bang and Olufson sound system has a tweeter that rises out of the dash and sounds exquisite, while the interior leather and wood trim is coach quality in every way.

On the outside, the 6er is a head turner. A somewhat controversial matte finish takes the traditional clear coat off the market and simplifies the paint a bit. It's unusual but that's the point. The stylish lines and aggressive posture make onlookers take car hasn't been overlooked. The luxury-seating package is well worth the upgrade and makes it impossible to not dream about a quick drive to anywhere. You'll find that the controls are as intuitive as any on the market; in this car, you will not be confused about where to find the air conditioning or the radio. This may sound simple but plenty of so-called luxury coupes leave drivers stumped for weeks while they hire exploratory committees to find out how to sync their phone to the car's Bluetooth.

You'll have enough technology in the 650i to keep you well-cared for while not breaking you into a sweat when it comes to the simple things. Driver-assisted steering and breaking are nice features that give you a sense of control but are subtle enough to let you have the say so in how the car handles. You'll definitely notice a nice responsiveness when the 650i is in "sport" mode versus "comfort." You'll be glued to those luxury seats with your foot to the floor in sport mode. In comfort mode, enjoy a more relaxed ride that is still responsive without being punchy.

There's enough power under the hood to quicken the heart. Though the 650i weighs in at a hefty 4,300 pounds, the performance won't disappoint. With the xDrive (all-wheel drive notice. Few of your neighbors will have seen a 650 and that sparks conversation. Expect a slew of questions and a few whistles. Double your mystique by opting for the convertible. The sportiness factor rises even more with the M Sport package that upgrades to 20-inch wheels and apron covers that are distinctive and add to the feeling of exclusivity.

One caution: don't take your boss on a road trip and stick him in the back seat.

While adults can manage a quick joy ride in the back, you'd be better off sticking your kids back there. BMW touts that this is a 4 + 1 seater but the +1 straddles the middle consol in the back seat and is less desirable than riding on the roof of a Mini Cooper.

The 650i will set you back a bit. The retail price, loaded, is around $118,000 with the V-8 twin turbo. You can opt for a less expensive model by choosing the 350 horsepower six-cylinder engine and forgoing some of the accessories. But if you're in the market for a sports car that drives like a luxury vehicle, you'll want to give this shape-shifting beauty a look.

The 650i is the total package.

Making a statement

By Françoise Rhodes

Alexander McQueen

Your choice in rings has a lot to say about you

Our mothers called it a cocktail ring, but times have changed. Today, this same opulent eye-catching finger jewelry is called a statement ring, and designers say it's one piece of jewelry that will never go out of style.

A statement ring includes eye-catching bling and is typically so unusual that people can't stop talking about it. Often the greatest value to these rings is that you can see them from a mile away, and many are sentimental favorites, too. Statement rings were once most likely to be heirlooms or finds from bazaars, but their increasing popularity with the Hollywood crowd has prompted designers to create mind-blowing finger jewelry—with a hefty price tag.

Even though the term 'statement' pretty much says it all, designers continue to try to define the concept. As one put it: "They are timeless and statement enough to the point that you don't have to bring anything else."

Another notes, "The rings are a great way of saying something without actually saying anything."

The duty of the statement ring is to transform any woman—or outfit—into a higher level of sophistication, so choose your ring wisely, or perhaps boldly. This accessory is by definition a conversation piece that will prompt discussions about its origins and history. It is amazing that so much attention can be garnered from one ring.

Statement rings come in all shapes and sizes. Enjoying tremendous popularity now is the YSL "Arty" Oval Red Stone Ring, $290 on YSL.com. Disney jewelry is another of-the-moment choice, and not just for kids. A mini replica of Disney's iconic castle is whimsical in gold with purple towers. The Disney Couture Oversized Castle is $70 at fredflare.com

Vampires are a statement and so is the VERAMEAT Vampire Love Ring, complete with teeth, $110 at verameat.com. The Skull, Starfish & Claw ring by Alexander McQueen pops with color and sparkle; it's priced at $245 at bergdorfgoodman.com

Fine jewelers such as Leeds and Sons have put their own twist on statement rings with the Utopia-Gallery Collection. These beauties are made with Australian white pearl or Tahitian black pearl set in 18k white or rose gold. For more details visit Leedsandson.com

As the ultra chic trend for 2012, the best part about these rings is that there is no rhyme or reason to them and no need to color coordinate. In fact that's the point. These rings are all about you being bold and daring.

One caveat: leave other statement pieces at home; your ring should tell the whole story.

On a complementary note, clothing this season will do even more to make your ring stand out as colors are trending away from the bright palettes of past seasons. Instead, there's a resurgence of neutral shades and flesh and earth tones. Also on the way out are the feathers that have long been popular for hair, clothing and accessories. Other natural materials, however, are taking their place, including shells, wood and seed beads. And look for heavy use of resin plastic.

Trends come and go, but one fashion rule never changes: Whatever you wear and however you wear it, make it a statement that is true to you.

Colors Are Blooming this spring

In: tangerine, phlox and zest.
Out: navy, black and gray

Antigua Collection

On the golf course this spring, it isn't so much about what you are wearing as about the colors you are wearing. Spring fashion colors are blooming says Pantone, the global authority on color. Setting the standard for the design industry, Pantone bases its final decision of what's hot and what's not on the prominent colors, inspirations and philosophies showcased each year at New York Fashion Week. The "Pantone Fashion Color Report" serves as a reference tool throughout each year for the design community, fashion enthusiast, reporters and retailers. Whatever the hues du jour may be, it's then the designer's job to create a theme.

Tender Shoots, Grayed Jade and Lemon Zest are only a few of the colors on the Spring 2013 palette. A unanimous trend in this season's golf and resort-style clothing is a focus on colors inspired by white sandy beaches, abundant sunshine and tropical flora. Golfers take note: leave the blacks, navies and grays in the closet.

Industry icon Rick Martin of Martin Golf Apparel has created a collection that presents an incredible depth of natural hues across two distinct color palettes: Riviera and Costa del Sol. The colors may be inspired by two iconic coastal destinations, but there is more to them than a nod to vacation paradise.

"One of the fundamental philosophies that I have developed over a lifetime of experience in the apparel business is choosing colors that complement and flatter a variety of skin tones," says Martin.

The Classic Merino V-neck sweater and woven popover sports shirt are offered in both distinct colors groups. The beautiful and bright Riviera color grouping, named after the legendary French Riviera, stands out with aquatic lapis blue, brilliant carmine red, soothing aqua, gleaming lime and bold tangerine. The soft and elegant Costa del Sol palette captures the essence of southern Spain with maize yellow, lime grass, melon, pink and orchid.

Other notable styles in the Martin collection include the Solid Royal Oxford long sleeve button-down and the Palm Cove Stripe lisle polo. martingolfapparel.com

For those who like clothes that offer pops of color as subtle details, the Antigua collection is a must-have. "For Spring 2013, the focus of pop accent colors on less conspicuous fabrications throughout the collections shows off the styling and design features of the individuals garments," says Sean Gregg, director of product development for Antigua.

The pop color palette introduced last season for the Antigua men's collection includes six new invigorating colors: lapis, margarita, apple, melon, phlox and zest. Phlox is a color group of pinks while zest is a lemon-drop yellow.

As for the ladies, Antigua's palette for its women's collection is based on the most current trends in an overall market screaming color. Six hues define the line that includes the Kiss/Strawberry collection inspired by dreamy Caribbean sunsets; the Fountain/Sapphire collection inspired by the expanse of blue sky, water glistening in the sunlight and the crash of waves in the ocean; and the Pansy/Orchid collection inspired by a peaceful botanical garden.

Antigua continues to build on its innovation in fabrics, setting it apart from competitors. Desert Dry technology, for example, is an advanced moisture-wicking technology created exclusively for Antigua that absorbs and wicks moisture quickly and evenly. It achieves the most efficient evaporation possible, which keeps the wearer absolutely comfortable on or off the golf course. antigua.com

Need more color? Puma's tech golf shorts for men come in blue, cherry tomato and white. shop.puma.com

Tracy Lynn's warm orange golf short for women has an added splash with its flirty floral short underneath. tracylynnngolf.com

Style note: The length of men's shorts continues to be slightly above the knee, and ladies, skorts are still trendy but keep them short, not granny length.

Color, color, color is all the rage this spring, so dress with flare and dare to be noticed.

The Country Club of Colorado - Colorado Springs

The 7,056-yard course, Pete Dye's first layout west of the Mississippi, features broad fairways set along a 35-acre lake beneath mountain peaks and blue skies. More than 300 days of sun annually mean the course is open for play in every season, and facilities include tennis, aquatics, fitness and onsite dining.

Fox Hollow Golf Club - Lakewood

You're looking down a 445-yard par-4 with an 80-foot drop from fairway to green. You could be on any great championship course but this is Fox Hollow, owned by the city of Lakewood, and No.5 is its signature hole. Not that it's the only excellent hole. The 27-yard layout has three distinct nines—The Canyon, The Meadow and The Links—each one with something fun and challenging for every level of golfer.

Grand Elk Golf Club - Granby

Coloradoan and PGA champion Craig Stadler designed Grand Elk with architect Tripp Davis. The setting is a high alpine valley 65 miles west of Denver, but this is not your typical mountain layout. Rather, it's a Heathland-style course, derivative of the heath-covered moors of the United Kingdom's own "high country."

Heritage Todd Creek Golf Club - Thornton

Designer Arthur Hills crafted this 7,435-yard championship course so that it beautifully complements the natural contours of the Rocky Mountain landscape—rolling fairways, a winding creek, elevation changes, native grasses and wetlands. And it's just a short drive north of downtown Denver.

Keystone Ranch Golf Course - Keystone

Robert Trent Jones, Jr. designed the Ranch Course, which is really two courses in one. The front nine is reminiscent of the links-style golf courses of Scotland, while the back nine is classic mountain course winding through lodgepole pines. The elevation changes aren't huge, but the bunkers are many.

Lakota Canyon Ranch - New Castle

Jim Engh doesn't have time to rest on his many laurels, among them Golf Digest's Architect of the Year ranking in 2003. Lakota Canyon Ranch, opened in 2004, is a typical Engh design, one that masterfully incorporates features of the natural landscape into a stunning course. Valley wetlands, deep, rugged canyons and soaring ridges all define play here.

Legacy Ridge Golf Course - Westminster

Legacy Ridge is considered one of the state's top public courses and is lauded for its environmentally friendly design. Architect Arthur Hills designed the course with respect for the wildlife-rich natural wetlands, native grasses and large mature cottonwoods, and since its debut in 1994, golfers have found this 7,200-yard beauty to be infinitely playable and challenging.

Plum Creek Golf & Country Club - Castle Rock

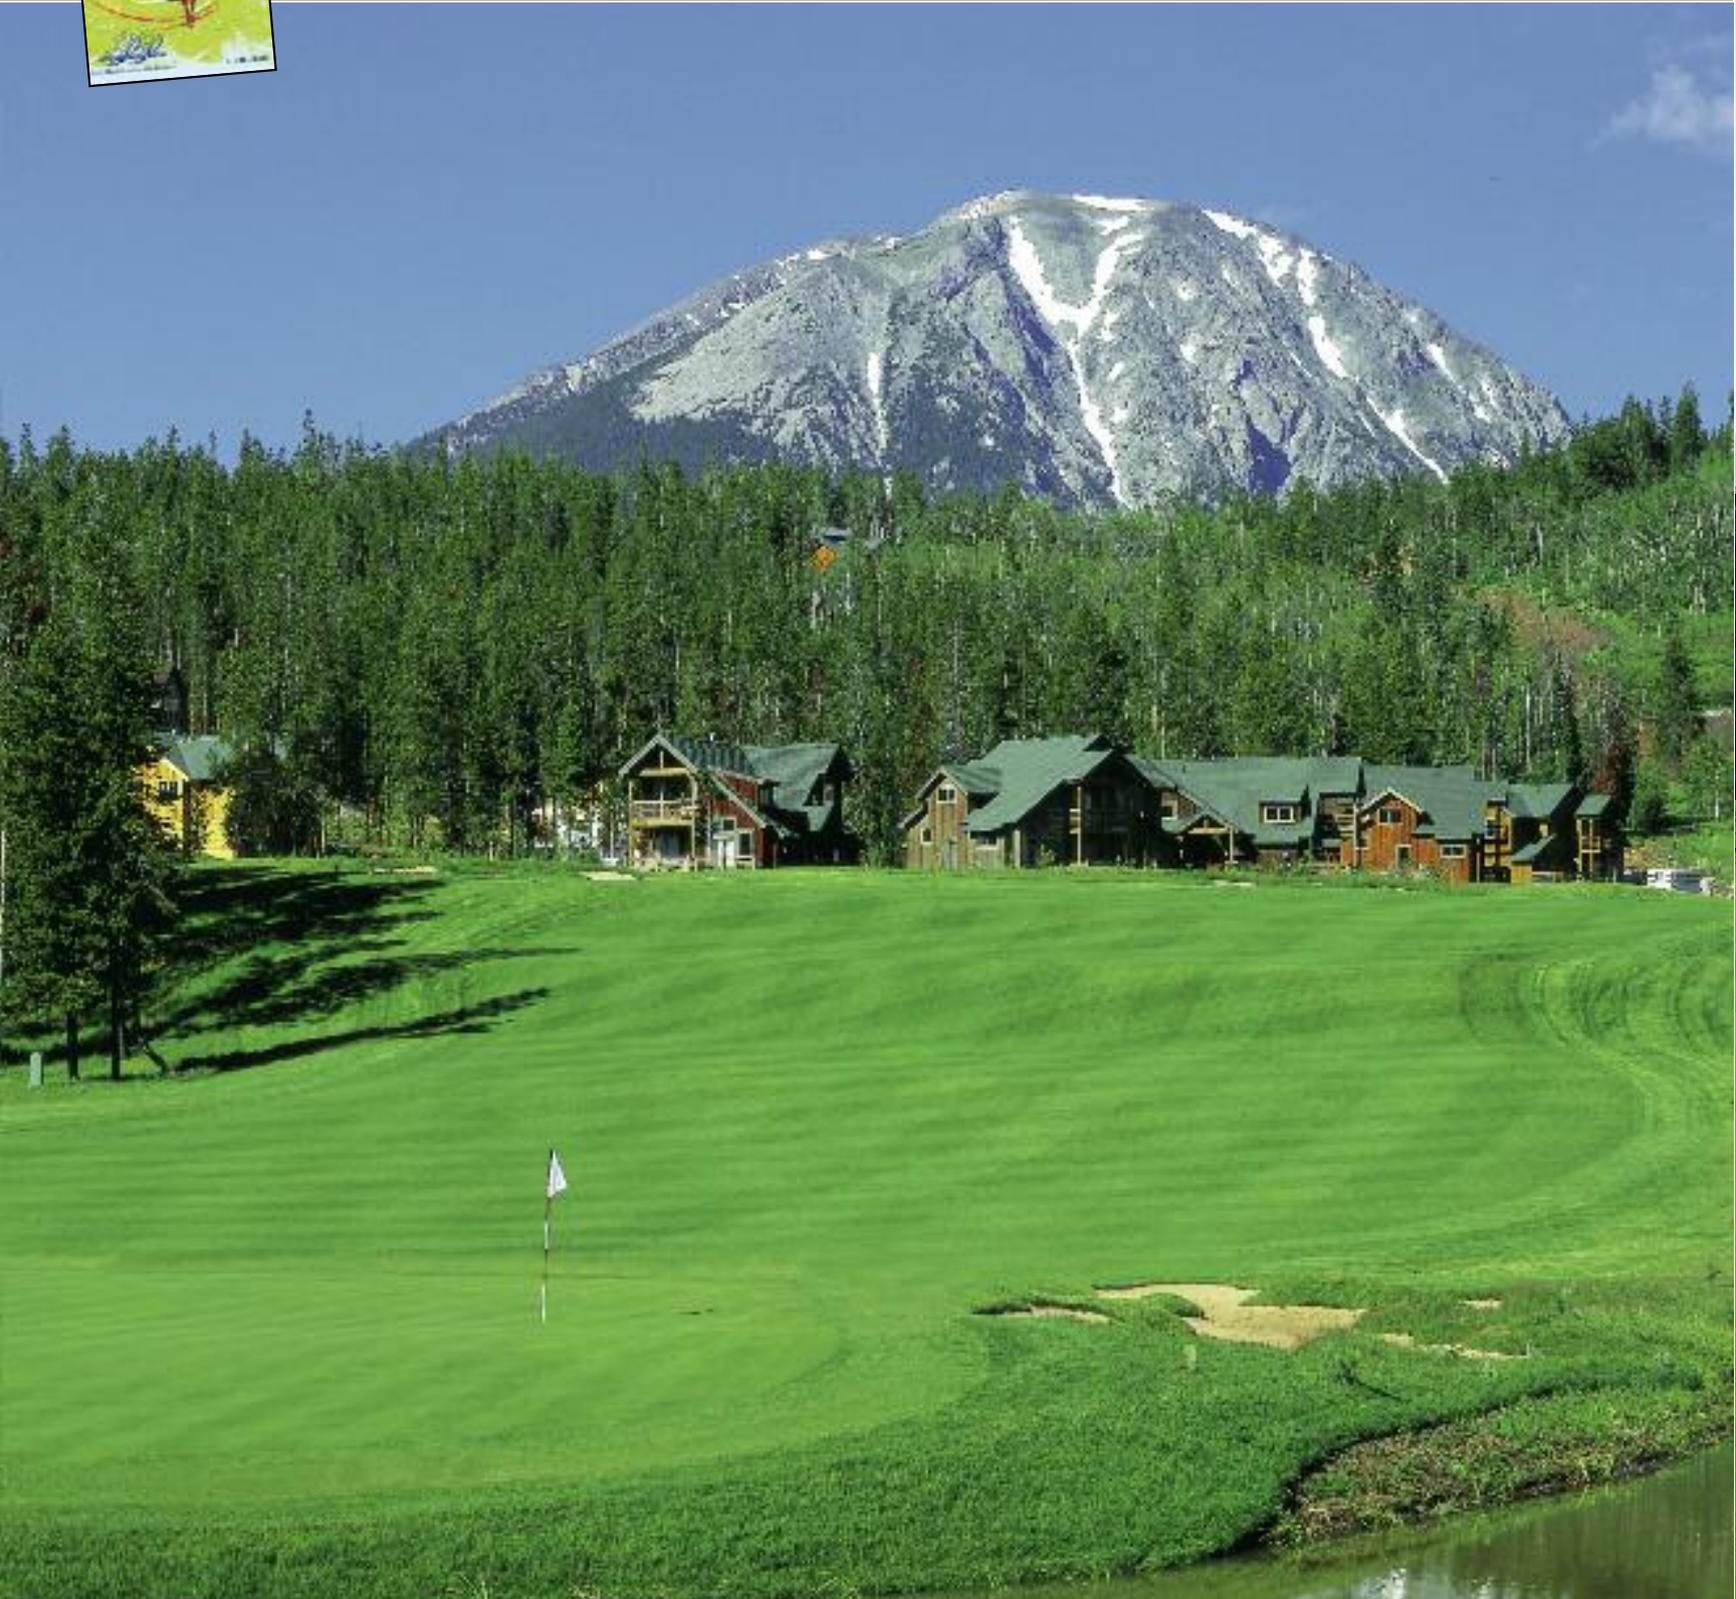

Pete Dye created some of the state's most memorable holes at this Castle Rock golf course, a former TPC course that played host to a Champions Tour event for several years. Two of the layout's Par 3s are particularly memorable—No. 12 with its railroad ties around the green and No. 17 played over water.

The Raven at Three Peaks - Silverthorne

The Raven Golf Club at Three Peaks is considered one of the top courses in the country and, without hesitation, the best mountain course in Colorado. Located in Silverthorne, Colorado, just an hour from Denver and minutes from the Vail Valley's top destinations, the Raven's spectacular setting is only surpassed by our personalized service. The challenging, but eminently playable Tom Lehman and Hurdzan/Fry golf course design, features lush rolling fairways and immaculate greens surrounded by towering stands of pine and aspen, snow capped 13,000 foot peaks, crystal clear creeks and trout filled lakes.

The Golf Club at Redlands Mesa - Grand Junction

Colorado Golf Magazine readers vote this the most underrated public or resort course in the state. It lies along the base of majestic Colorado National Monument in Grand Junction and few courses can match its scenic splendor. Among its many awards, Sports Illustrated voted it the #3 Best New Golf Course in the World in 2002, the year it opened.

Vail Golf Club - Vail

Everything about it says upscale, but the 7,024-yard course at the foot of the Gore Mountain Range is open to the public and managed by Vail Recreation District. It was recognized by Golf Digest as a Top 100 Resort Course, and not because your ball flies so far at 8,200 feet up in the Rockies. It's a stunning layout with vistas of the Gore Range and White River National Forest, and one of the most walkable courses in Eagle County
