Publisher's Notes

By Timothy J. Pade • pade@coloradogolf.com

With this issue of Colorado Golf Magazine, we are proud to feature the historic Solheim Cup. The Solheim is a truly prestigious stage on which the top women golfers from the United States and Europe play, and for 2013 that stage is set here in our state. This year, with Colorado experiencing one of the worst fires in our history, the Solheim takes on additional importance as a portion of the tournament's June ticket sales are being donated to the Colorado Professional Fire Fighters Foundation. We hope everyone will make it out to Colorado Golf Club in Parker to watch the match-play competition, which takes place the week of Aug. 13.

Colorado has a long, proud history of supporting women's golf. In 2011, it was the U. S. Women's Open, when we watched So Yeon Ryu defeat Hee Kyung Seo in a three-hole playoff. In fact, Colorado has played host to the U.S. Women's Open several times. And from 1972 to 1986, the Columbia Savings LPGA National Pro-Am was played here, rotating through many of our great golf courses, including Green Gables, Rolling Hills, Pinehurst, Columbine, Lone Tree, Meridian and Glenmoor Country Club.

The Solheim Cup is one you don't want to miss. This international event will certainly be historic and will once again put Colorado front and center in the world of golf. To read more, turn to our coverage starting on pg. 12.

Also in this issue, we feature some amazing restaurants in the Vail and Beaver Creek area. Of course, Vail and Edwards are also hotbeds for golf. At an altitude of more than 8,000 feet, golf balls seem to fly forever, but that's just one reason to try Colorado's superb mountain courses. After your round, you can enjoy some of the state's top dining spots, too. Our restaurant coverage starts on pg. 34, and our feature on Vail Golf Club begins on pg. 30.

As a publication dedicated to the golf lifestyle, we also cover fashion, jewelry, luxury automobiles and so much more. We also continuously update our directories and club information to keep you abreast of the latest golf news. We hope you enjoy Colorado Golf Magazine, and we look forward to seeing you out on the course.

Solheim Cup

By Matt McKay

Americans look to defend their unblemished record at home at the Colorado Golf Club

Tears. Confusion. Second-guessing. That hot feeling that creeps up your spine and into your brain, setting your hair on fire and forcing you to break out in a feverish sweat; the realization that you've just made a massive and uncorrectable mistake.

Those emotions were rampant amongst the U.S. Team members when Azahara Munoz dropped Angela Stanford in the decisive match that handed the Solheim Cup back to the Europeans at Ireland's Killeen Castle in September 2011. The 15-13 win was the European's first in four competitions, and sweet revenge for their repeat captain, Alison Nicholas.

similar soul-crushing sensations while surrounded by the beauty of Parker's Colorado Golf Club seems incongruous and incomprehensible to U.S. players, who have yet to fail in cup competitions on U.S. soil.

While Munoz's win was the match that secured the cup for the Europeans, there were many more ingredients to the mix that baked the American's cake. The final day started badly for the U.S. even before the first ball was struck; Cristie Kerr, who'd played with an inflamed wrist though the first two days of competition, determined the pain was too great to play in singles, and her match was forfeited to Karen Stupples.

European Captain Liselotte Neumann and U.S. Captain Meg Mallon

Alternatively, it stunned the Americans. Despite the 8-8 scorline after two days of competition, the visitors felt they had one hand on the cup heading into singles matches, believing they had a clear advantage in the format.

"I think our gals played their hearts out. We couldn't ask any more of them," U.S. Captain Rosie Jones said after the fateful final day of play. "Europe just played better than us in that last 35 minutes."

Players draw motivation from all manner of sources, but one thing is certain. The loss has simmered in the bellies of the Americans like a smoldering chunk of coal for the last many months. It's doubtless that fire, combined with an extreme aversion to the feelings of defeat generated by the 2011 outcome, will dominate large portions of their consciousness as they prepare for the next competition August 16-18. To experience

The Americans were also dealt a stiff setback when Paula Creamer and Stacy Lewis, two of the team's top players, lost their matches to Catriona Matthew and Sophie Gustafson. Matthew drilled Creamer 6 and 5, while Gustafson defeated Lewis, 2-up.

The U.S. was still in position to win when a second rain delay gave the Europeans a chance to rally around one another. After a three-way pep talk, Suzann Pettersen, Caroline Hedwall, and Munoz each returned to the course and got results from their matches. Pettersen made three straight birdies to rally for a 1-up win over Michelle Wie, Hedwall was 2-down with two to play but came back to halve with Ryann O'Toole, and Munoz erased an early 1-down deficit to defeat Stanford, 1-up.

Jones took on a boatload of criticism after the tournament for the handling of the Kerr situation. However, both she and Kerr defended their positions, saying the injury cropped up just before because Kerr was not rested the first two days, playing all four team matches. But both insisted afterward they wouldn't have done anything different if they could do it again.

"I checked with her every single match to make sure," said Jones. "Right before, that was my last thing I did right before I submitted my pairings was to check on Cristie, because she was playing in some of the last matches, to make sure she was ready to go. She felt good. She played well."

And with that most recent history, the competition now comes to Colorado, just a couple of years after the U.S. Women's Open was contested at The Broadmoor Resort. While the team is still being determined, U.S. Captain Meg Mallon is already working with a couple of givens: she'll have highly-motivated players, and she certainly won't want to wax philosophically about a second-straight U.S. defeat.

Joe Sakic

16 Years Feeding Hope for Colorado Kids

Sakic's loyalty to fighting hunger through Food Bank of the Rockies continues with the 16th Annual Joe Sakic Celebrity Classic Golf Tournament.

Colorado has the fastest growing rate of childhood poverty in the nation. With poverty comes the reality that many Colorado kids don't have the means to receive regular meals. Not to mention healthy meals. While hunger at any age is debilitating, it is especially hard on children. We all bear the costs down the road when children aren't nourished at a young age. Luckily, there are folks who have a heart and passion for fighting childhood hunger in our great state. Enter Joe and Debbie Sakic.

United States. More importantly, in Sanctuary's 16-year history, charity golf tournaments have raised millions of dollars for important causes.

Friday evening, August 23, the Sakics will host an elegant celebration of dining, entertainment and high-end auction items. The Joe and Debbie Sakic Bringing Hope to the Table Celebration, Presented by CoBank, will take place at the Marriott Denver Tech Center. Comedian, John Reep, will provide the evening's entertainment. The event kicks off with a cocktail reception at 16 years ago, hockey all star, Joe Sakic, and wife, Debbie, decided to become a voice for Colorado's low income kids and have made a lasting impact on childhood hunger in our state. Partnering with Food Bank of the Rockies (FBR) resulted in two annual fundraising events that have become the financial backbone for FBR's children's programs.

Stunningly beautiful Sanctuary is the meeting grounds for the first event, The Joe Sakic Celebrity Classic Golf Tournament, presented by RE/MAX. On Thursday, August 22, celebrities and sponsors will join Joe for his 16th annual tournament. Dave and Gail Liniger, co-founders of RE/MAX, created Sanctuary on a wildlife refuge in Colorado's Front Range for the exclusive use of selected charities and invited guests. Sanctuary has been rated by Golf Digest and Golfweek among the top golf courses in the 6:00pm, followed by dinner. Marc Moser of the Altitude Radio Network will emcee the evening's festivities. Sport Radio 104.3 The Fan is the 2013 Radio Partner for the event.

FBR has been fighting hunger and feeding hope for 34 years and currently provides food to nearly 1,100 partner agency programs. Last year alone, over 88,000 meals per day were provided to our neighbors in need. 42% of those served through FBR's partner agencies are children. Over the course of the partnership with the Sakics, FBR has been fortunate enough to provide over over 15 million meals to Colorado children in need. Childhood hunger is a problem that is solvable. The Sakics are continuing to work toward ending the pains of hunger felt by Colorado children in need. You can help. Join Joe and Debbie this August to fight hunger, feed hope and have a great time in the process.

Golf spots are sold out. To learn more and to register for the dinner event, go to the events page at www.foodbankrockies.org, or call 303.375.5838.

The latest on golf gear and other products you simply must have

By Mike Conrad

Let's face it; golfing in the Colorado can be HOT! First, the heat doesn't bother me. Second, I go prepared to stay cool! As a "Gadget Guy" I am often asked what I pack to keep cool, and this summer edition of Colorado Golf Magazine is the perfect time to share my secrets. Some of these items I keep in my golf bag, some are waiting when I get home.

Chill Skinz

The Chill Skinz is a towel designed to keep you cool. Not only is it great for golfers, runners, tennis players and any other summer athlete, it is also great for any hot day. Simply wet the Chill Skinz with cold water, squeeze out the excess water before you leave and slip it in your bag. When needed, take the Chill Skinz out, shake to activate the towel and apply it to the back of your neck (or other heated areas). When activated, the towel drops to about 20 degrees cooler than the outside temperature. Check it out online at chillskinz.com

Cool Off

Another cool product is Cool Off. You can easily store this handy little wipe in your golf bag, backpack or purse. Its 17 natural herbs help keep the cool feeling going after the initial application. Whenever you need a quick chill, simply open the Cool Off pack wipe and feel the relief. You'll be amazed at the coolness this tiny package provides, and the handy size means you can easily fit several of these in your pocket to last the entire day. For more information on Cool Off, log on to thequickchill.com

Urburn Sunburn

If you do happen to get burned, you should check out Urburn Sunburn relief. Heck, that's just fun to say. Take it from a true Irishman, I know what works on a sunburn. Urburn is formulated with 2.5 percent lidocaine to provide fast pain relief (remember the TV show Emergency? Those guys prescribed lidocaine for almost everything!). Urburn Sunburn relief is made by Water-Jel. waterjel.com

Brush on Block

Being Irish, I can get a sunburn under a 100-watt light bulb. I could probably use SPF 1,000,000 and still get a burn. We all know we should use sunblock, and we typically spray on gobs and gobs before heading outside in the morning. The key, however, is what you do later in the day. I found a product called Brush on Block. This isn't your normal sunscreen. As a matter of fact, it looks more like a make-up brush than sunblock and its design is one key to its success. Think about the times you've had sunscreen in your eye, and how much it stings and burns. With Brush on Block, you brush it on as if you are applying make-up (guys, just accept this as fact). With the easy-apply brush, you avoid getting sunblock in your eyes, and the sunblock doesn't run when you sweat. Since it is made with minerals, you hardly know you're wearing sunscreen. Not only is this perfect for around your face and neck, it's also a bonus for guys like me with thinning hair—it easily covers that bald spot! Women can keep Brush on Block in their handbag, men can slide it in their satchel (Indiana Jones has one) and keep one in their golf bag as well. That makes it easy to continue applying it throughout the day as necessary. For all of the SPF facts and mineral information, go to brushonblock.com

Margaritaville Cordless Frozen Concoction Maker

When it comes to frozen drinks, I'm a loser. The blender never seems to chop the ice right or the beverage-to-ice ratio is off. Fortunately, the brainiacs at Margaritaville have made me a better bartender with the ultimate Margaritaville Cordless Frozen Concoction Maker. While I initially hesitated to call it a frozen concoction maker (a moniker relating to Jimmy Buffet's famed song around which his chain of restaurants and associated products have been built), there is no way I can call it a mere blender. First, it runs off a heavy-duty 18-volt NiCd battery, so it shaves ice and perfectly blends ingredients to create up to 60 restaurant-quality frozen drinks on a single charge. Its rugged, portable design makes it easy to take poolside, out on a boat, tailgating or anywhere else you can think of. Here's how easy it is to make your favorite frozen beverage: First, place the ice in the top ice holder; next, mix your favorite beverage in the shatterproof pitcher; finally, select for one, two or three glasses and hit the button. The Margaritaville Cordless Frozen Concoction Maker does all the work for you. It's powerful, easy to use and so far I have yet to outdrink the battery! This is a gadget that I have been personally testing every weekend this summer—and it's paradise unplugged! To get your own for your next 19th-hole celebration, visit margaritavillecarg.com

Finally, I want to point out that, although cool, none of these products are a replacement for good hydration. It's especially important during the summer that you drink plenty of water throughout the day. Then, keep the above products on hand to protect you from the sun, cool you in soaring temperatures or relax you at day's end. Ahhhh, summer.

A Summer of Charity: Four Worthy Causes

This summer, four Denver area charity events will provide you with an opportunity to give back, while enjoying spectacular food, entertainment, and camaraderie.

"From what we get, we can make a living; what we give, however, makes a life." – Arthur Ashe

Time. Talents. Resources. Everyone has something they can contribute to their local communities. Luckily for Colorado residents, the greater Denver area's hub of non-profits and medical facilities offer a variety of highly-renowned charity options to choose from.

From June to August, the following four charity events will feature live entertainment, auctions, and world-class golf, while raising thousands of dollars for some of the state's most worthy causes.

Play a Round for Kids

The Ridge at Castle Pines North
Castle Rock, Colo.
June 20, 2013
www.MSVhome.org

Mount Saint Vincent, a Denver-based children's treatment center, is hosting its 7th annual Play a Round for Kids, an 18-hole golf tournament at Castle Rock's The Ridge at Castle Pines North.

Featuring four sets of tees, ranging in distance from 5,011 to 7,013 yards, the Tom Weiskopf-design has been recognized by Colorado Golf Magazine as the state's best public course, and by Golf Digest, receiving 4 stars.

The tournament's $250 registration fee will include range balls, a silent auction, lunch, and an awards ceremony at The Ridge Bar and Grill. Proceeds will support Mount Saint Vincent's mission – to treat and educate children, aged 5 to 12, who have suffered from abuse, mental illness, neglect, or trauma.

"We had so much interest in last year's event that we decided to expand this year's tournament to a double-shotgun," said Donor Relations and Events Coordinator Angela Frederick. "We're expecting a full field of players."

Craig Hospital/RE/MAX, LLC Invitational Golf Tournament

Sanctuary
Sedalia, Colo.
August 1, 2013
www.craighospital.org/foundation

The 16th annual Craig Hospital/RE/MAX, LLC Invitational Golf Tournament will be held at the pristine Sanctuary golf course, a wildlife refuge known for its elk, fox, and mountain lion sightings.

Hosted by Englewood's Craig Hospital, acknowledged throughout the world for its specialty research and rehabilitation for patients with spinal cord and traumatic brain injuries, the tournament is supported by RE/MAX founders and Sanctuary owners, Dave and Gail Liniger.

Since 1997, the tournament has raised roughly $2 million in support of Craig Hospital, a private, non-profit facility that provides services like inpatient and outpatient medical care and neurosurgical rehab.

"Our patients and their families travel from throughout the United States and around the world to access Craig's programs and services because our patient outcomes are unparalleled among other similar treatment programs," said Mike Fordyce, Craig President and CEO.

Tournament registration will begin at 9 a.m., followed by a brunch buffet. A shotgun start will then occur at 11:10 a.m. All golfers will participate in an 18-hole, modified scramble, with prizes given for low team net and gross. Once tournament play has concluded, participants will be treated to dinner and an awards ceremony.

SaddleUp! and Pack Your Bags, a Denver Suitcase Party

Mayo Aviation Hangar, Centennial Airport
Englewood, Colo.
August 2, 2013
www.saddleupfoundation.org

In 2002, Jim and Shery McDonald-Galbreath, co-founders of Colorado Golf Club, founded SaddleUp! Foundation, the Denver area's largest recreational therapeutic riding program, created solely for children and adults with special needs.

To support this distinctive program, this year's Suitcase Party will feature live entertainment from former American Idol contestant Richie Law, scrumptious appetizers and drinks, and two incredible trip giveaways.

Four party guests will win a weekend trip to Paso Robles, Calif.'s Bianchi Family vineyards, receiving tours and spa treatments, while savoring the vineyard's finest wines. Four other guests will receive a two night stay at Vail's Sonnenalp Resort. The weekend getaway will likely include golf, spa treatments, and dinner at the acclaimed Restaurant Kelly Liken.

All party guests will arrive with suitcases, fully prepared to leave Colorado if they are chosen for the vineyard trip, as the four chosen guests will fly directly from the airport to California.

The party will begin at 6 p.m., with entertainment and a live auction occurring between 7:15 and 9:15 p.m., as the giveaway winners are chosen and announced.

Friends FORE Hospice Golf Tournament

Lakewood Country Club
Lakewood, Colo.
August 5, 2013
www.hospiceofsaintjohn.org

Founded in 1977, Lakewood's Hospice of St. John is currently the 2nd oldest inpatient hospice in the United States. Dedicated to compassionate care, the hospice offers integrative therapies, including pain treatment and palliative care, to patients, whether or not they are able to pay.

To help the hospice continue its mission — providing "above and beyond" care — the Friends FORE Hospice Golf Tournament was created in 2011.

Held at Lakewood Country Club, a private, Donald Ross-design, this year's 18-hole tournament costs $250 per golfer or $800 per foursome, prior to July 5th. Afterwards, registration rises to $1,000 per foursome.

"The [annual] tournament allows the Hospice of Saint John to connect with golfers while offering an amazing course, great food, [and] a fabulous silent auction, all to benefit the patients we serve," said Shannon Clifford, CFRE, Executive Director, Foundation of Saint John, LLC.

It's All in Your Head – Really

One key to improving your golf is improving self-confidence and self-efficacy

Nothing breeds confidence like prior success, but how do we accomplish this success? All golfers understand the importance of self-confidence. They must believe in their ability to meet the challenges of the task at hand each time they step up to the ball. Confidence, however, changes day-to-day and even shot to shot. It is easy to feel confident when things are going right; however, when performance is not at its best or the golfer is not experiencing success, confidence can be easily shaken.

Famous football coach Vince Lombardi once said, “Everyone is confident when they are winning. Real confidence occurs when athletes are losing but are still able to maintain self-belief, or when they learn from their failures or mistakes and move on.”

The Path to Confidence

Golfers who do not deal well with adversity or setbacks have a difficult time maintaining a positive mental attitude, which ultimately results in decreased performance. In the field of sports psychology, most of the research on self-confidence has been based on Stanford Professor Emeritus Albert Bandura’s theory of self-efficacy, defined as “belief in one’s capabilities to organize and execute the courses of action required to produce given attainments.”

For golfers, there are two elements of the research to consider. First, there are three types of sport-confidence: cognitive efficiency, resilience, and physical skills and training. All three of these are supported by nine sources of sport-confidence: demonstration of ability, mastery, social support, vicarious experience, coach’s leadership, situational favorableness, environmental comfort, physical self-presentation, and physical/mental preparation.

Prior success is directly related to personal mastery and thought to be the greatest influence on self-confidence. Interestingly, the research shows striking differences between men and women. Men ultimately demonstrate higher levels of confidence, as they are more concerned with physical/mental preparation and winning. Research suggests that women are more concerned with self-presentation, environmental comfort and social support than their male counterparts, as well as personal goals and standards.

Research also consistently shown that solid skills can be overruled by self-doubts, causing even the most skilled individuals to perform poorly under circumstances that undermine their belief in themselves. You’ve seen that happen time and time again to top pros on Tour.

Important of Practicing Mental Skills

There are numerous factors that contribute to confidence or a lack of it. Having an understanding of these factors can help you maintain a positive mindset for performance.

Accomplished golfers attribute great performance to enhanced mental skills. However, most golfers fail to practice their mental skills in the same manner that they practice their physical skills. This could be due to a lack of motivation or understanding of how to implement mental practice. Yet mental skills are just as important, or even more important, to successful performance, and it’s not as hard to practice them as one might think.

There are two strategies for improving mental skills: imagery and observational learning.

According to Bandura, “most human behavior is learned by observation through modeling.” When we are children, this comes naturally. We “watch and do.” But as we get older, we seem to have a need to try and cognitively understand what we are trying to accomplish. This is not always the best method for learning a motor skill, such as the golf swing.

Can-Do Strategy

Here’s a strategy to try: Identify a professional golfer whose swing most resembles your desired swing. It could be the tempo or the style that you wish to model. Naturally, it should be a swing that is realistic to your abilities, one that you have assessed with your golf and fitness instructors.

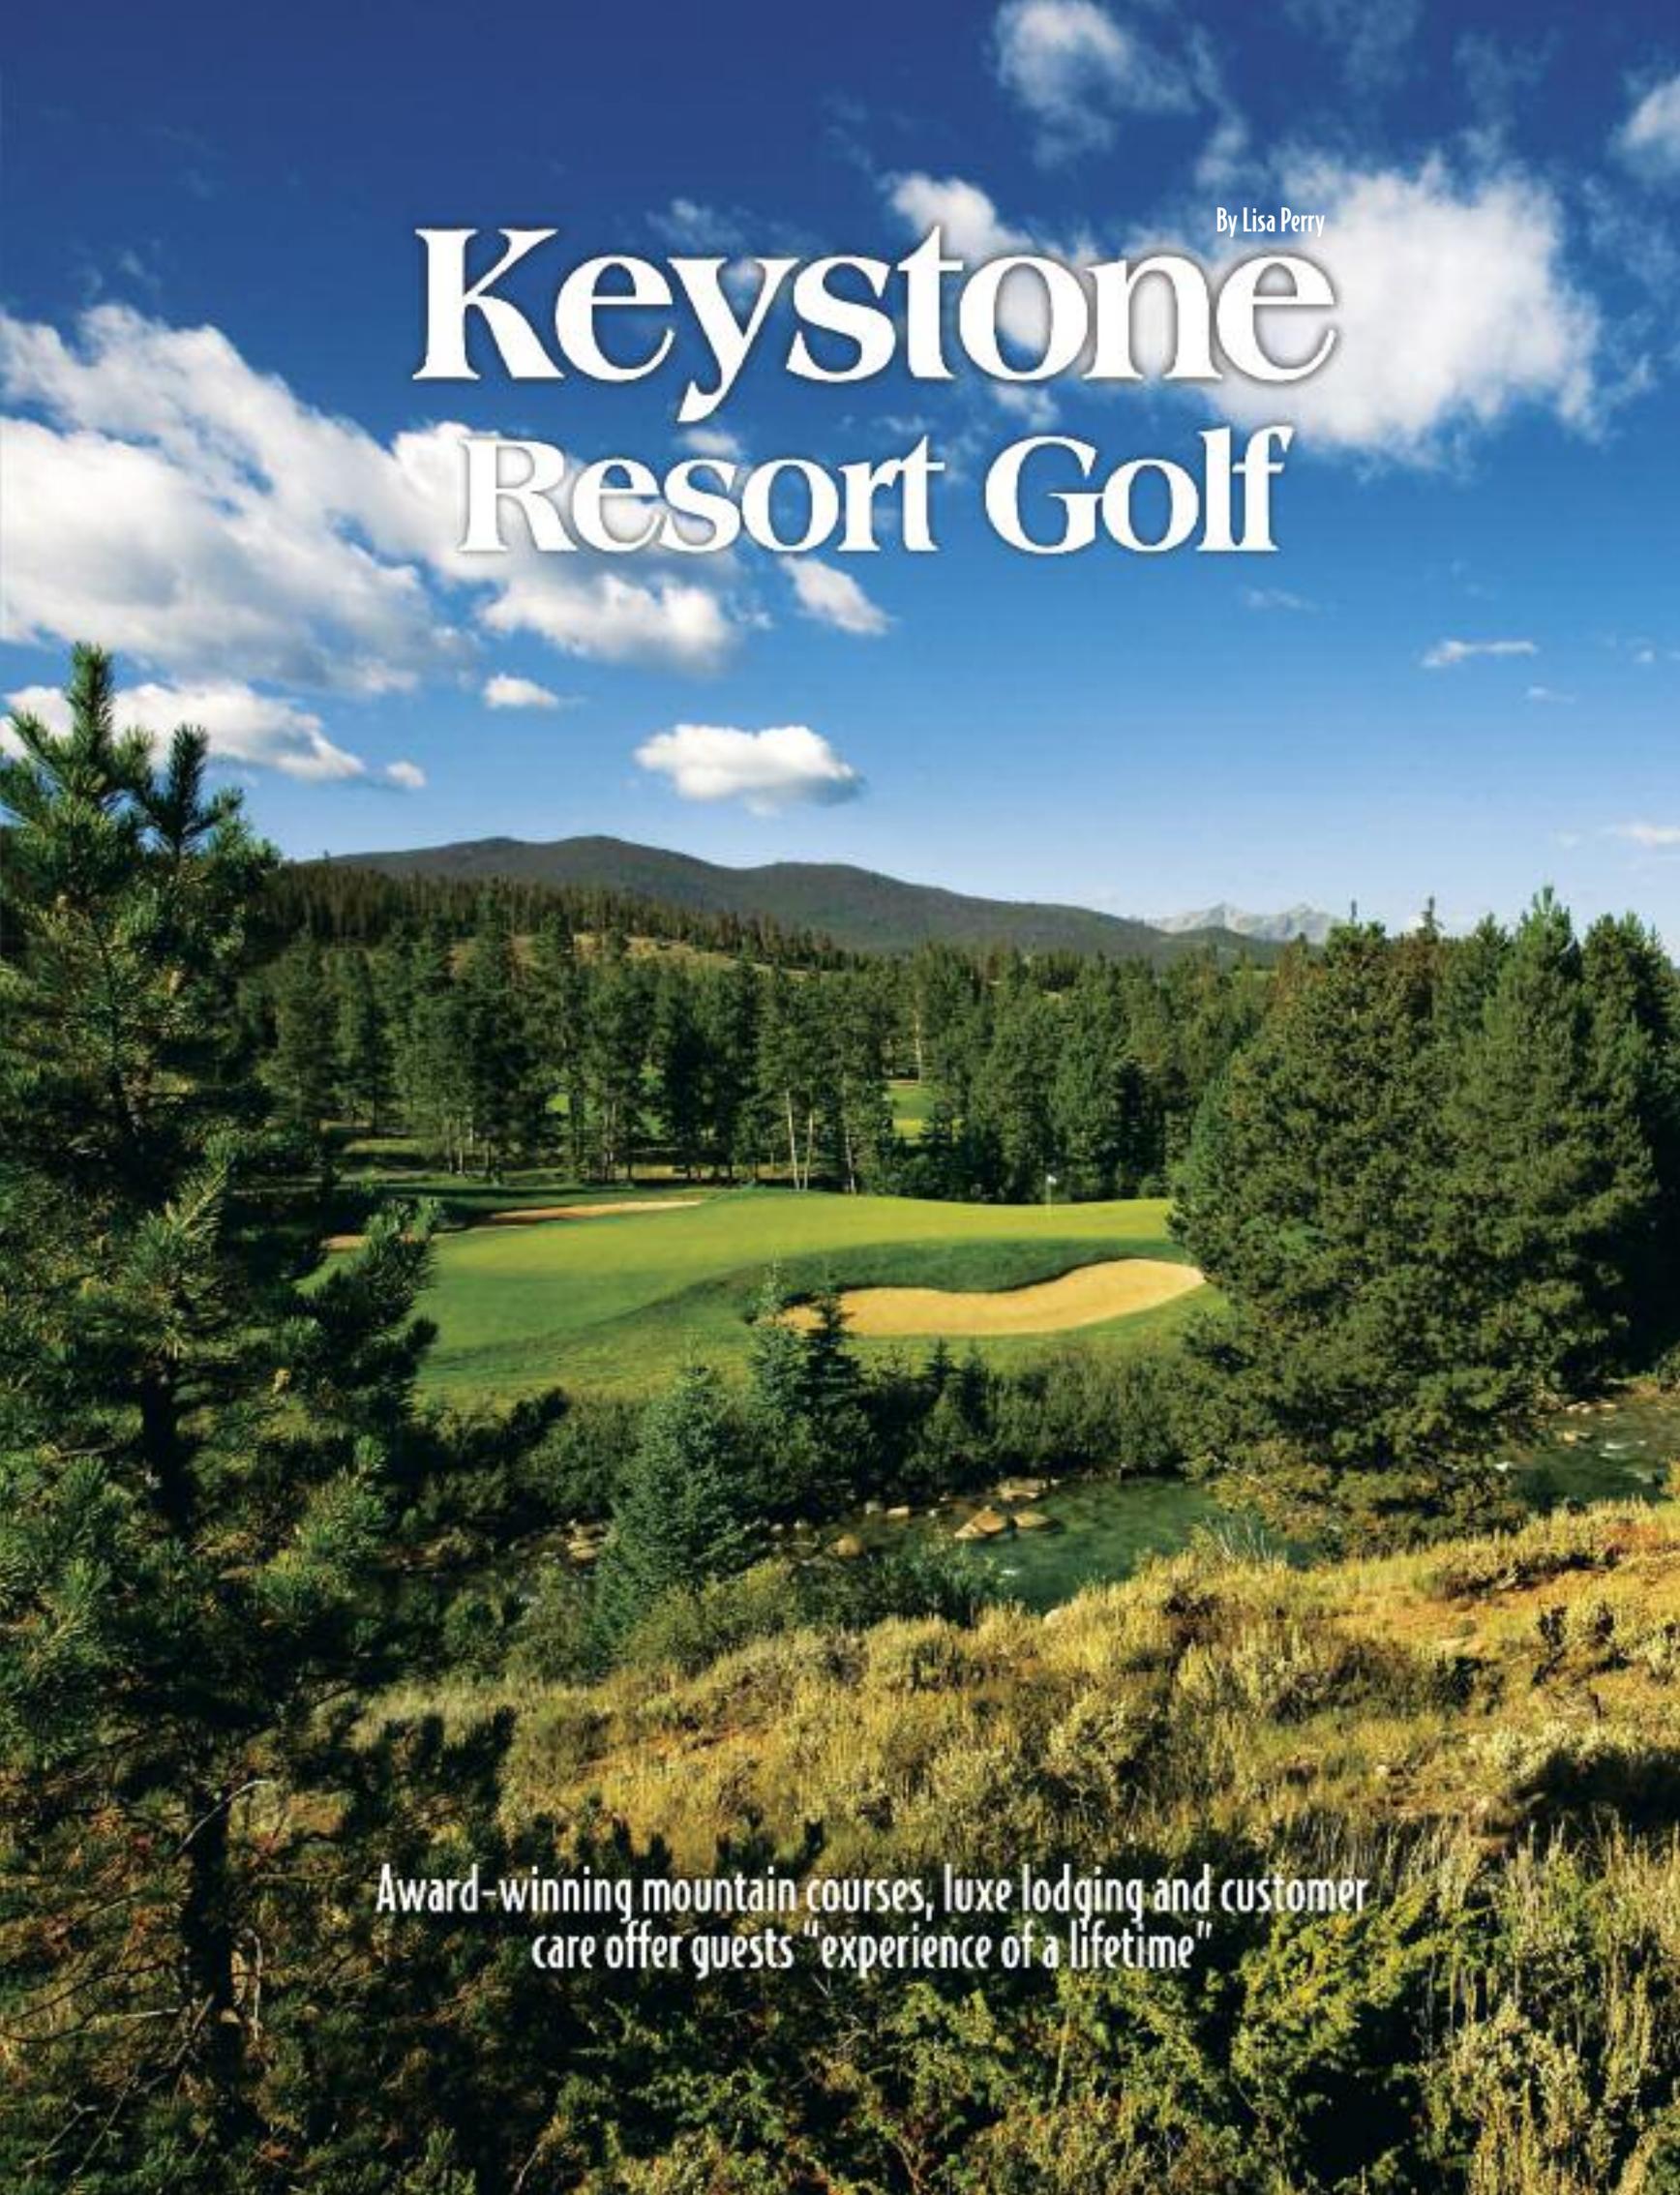

Find a video of your model swing and watch it before you begin your practice session or your round. Watch the video as often as possible, especially just prior to executing your swing. Your goal is to try and visualize the model swing while executing your swing, as opposed to trying to process verbal or technical information.

The more you practice visualizing your desired swing, the better you will become at visualizing, and that ultimately should translate into better performance.

Keystone Resort Golf

Award-winning mountain courses, luxe lodging and customer care offer guests "experience of a lifetime"

Golf resorts may win accolades in a particular area, but it's hard to find one with "best" awards across the board: resort course, overall facility, customer service, and even environmental efforts. Keystone Resort Golf has been honored for all-of-the-above and more—even its stay-and-play packages have been singled out.

Philip Tobias, PGA head professional at Keystone Resort, says customer service can make a good golf course become great. But Keystone's combination of stellar facilities augmented by a commitment to customer care takes golf beyond the usual sky-high resort expectations. "It's our mission to deliver the experience of a lifetime to all guests, whether at the golf course or for a bike or paddleboat ride," says Tobias. "Resort staff have that professional bearing as well as the friendly smile we're all looking for on our vacation."

Keystone Golf is the only 36-hole venue in Summit County. "We have two completely different golf courses, so close in proximity they almost touch," says Tobias. "But you wouldn't know it if you were at River teeing up and suddenly transported to Ranch. That's how different they are. Our crew takes fantastic care of the golf courses, providing the best possible playing conditions you can achieve in the mountains."

Opened in 1988, Ranch Golf Course is the flagship of Keystone Golf, designed by Robert Trent Jones, Jr. "It has a unique personality for mountain golf: mountain links. The Ranch does have a few elevation changes but they are very subtle. When I go out to Ranch, I have the feeling of a stress-free atmosphere with wide-open spaces and 360-degree views of the surrounding mountain ranges, no matter which hole I'm standing on. It's what brings us all to Colorado. It's a special place with the original homestead still standing."

River Golf Course plays through trees with significant elevation changes. "The first hole is a pretty hefty elevation drop onto the fairway with a view of the Continental Divide," he says. "There's a transition from the 'Mountain 9' front and 'River 9' back where the course lives up to its name wrapping around the Snake River. You finish up on a Par 5 that overlooks Lake Dillon and Buffalo Mountain, a great hole. You can reach the green in two, with the possibility of an eagle or birdie."

Tobias says, "Golfers, especially first-timers, say the scenery is fabulous, we have friendly service and how easy it is to book a teetime. The reservations staff know the entire resort and there is a golf concierge who specializes in golf packages. Our stay-and-play packages are second to none. Nothing can compete with our level of lodging: hotels to condos and private homes." Managed by Vail Resorts, Keystone's golf packages include accommodations from Keystone Lodge to luxury properties in Breckenridge and Vail. The resort also hosts golf events, weddings and conferences. "We have the largest conference center in the mountains, plus the best lodging, spa, two golf courses and outdoor activities. We have it all."

This season, Ranch course forward tees have been adjusted to play at 4,600 yards, shortened from last year's 5,500. "We do a great job of accommodating all abilities and experience levels," says Tobias. "We brought in junior tees that play from the fairways. You'd have a hard time finding holes more than 155 yards for a Par 5."

A newly remodeled clubhouse awaits golfers in 2013. "It's beautiful," says Tobias. "I have a feeling repeat guests who walk through the door won't recognize it." Instructional programs include SNAG (Starting New at Golf), focusing heavily on kids and introducing golf as a family activity. "It's a kind of miniature golf on steroids," says Tobias, using irons, putters and a pseudo tennis ball. A six-hole course for all ages opens this season, winding around the practice facility. The resort hosts a women-specific golf day on Aug. 21 featuring LPGA Hall of Famer Nancy Lopez. Vail Golf Club

Public course is arguably the most scenic, undeniably the most dedicated to pace of play in the Vail Valley

Playing golf at friendly, ultra-scenic Vail Golf Club is more than just a walk in the park. Golfers are clued in to the venue's mindset when they call for a teetime—the phone greeting immediately cites a pace-of-play goal for the day. The staff is dedicated to providing a thoroughly fun experience for golfers, and it begins with time management.

“We have a unique pace-of-play program in its fourth year of implementation,” says Director of Golf Alice Plain. “We’re a busy course and prior to the program, five-hour rounds were pretty regular. We hired a consultant who observed what we did for four days. It is a complex problem.” The result? “We actively monitor the course, we explain our expectations to guests on the first tee, and we have a marshal on the front and on the back with clocks to help golfers with self-monitoring. With the program, we’ve improved a minimum of 45 minutes, so we’re doing something right. Most people are time-conscious and we’re on the cutting edge to resolve the issue.”

Ben Krueger designed the course that runs alongside I-70 and is just over 7,000 yards from the tips, a Par 71. “More than half the course is played looking up at Gore Range, including the driving range,” says Plain.

“Even when it’s 70 degrees, you can be looking at snow. The views are unmatched—you’ll even see bighorn sheep on the hillside—and so is the value. It’s a memorable golf course laid out so it’s playable.

“Because we’re managed by Vail Recreation, we promote health and wellness, and we do promote walking the course,” says Plain. “It was built in 1962 with small elevation changes—unique compared to new courses—and it’s just a short distance from greens to tees.”

Customer service is paramount. “I’m very selective in who I hire to work here,” says Plain. “Our staff does a great job making guests feel comfortable and at home. We’re public and have a lot of regulars, but we treat everyone like they’re a member of a private club, and try to exceed everyone’s expectations to give them an experience they’ll remember. The atmosphere is fun-loving and genuinely friendly.”

Instructional programs in place for 2013 are geared toward both Vail Valley residents and visitors alike, and include a variety of junior programs and even overnight camps. Plain created a program, new this year, especially for girls ages 13-17. Adults can participate in a weekly couples clinic on Friday evenings that includes instruction along with drinks and appetizers on the driving range, and a new weekly women’s clinic called Lessons, Ladies and Libations. A weekly three-person “play with a pro” class happens on Monday evenings, and brand-new golfers can participate in the PGA’s national Get Golf Ready program: three days of instruction for $99. Happy Valley Grill is open daily for lunch onsite with Chef Hunter Smith at the helm—he’s a former Food Network “Iron Chef America” participant.

Plain was honored this year as the first woman to win the PGA West Chapter’s Bill Strausbaugh Award that began with a nomination by her peers for her success mentoring young PGA professionals. For more information about Vail Golf Club, go to VailGolfClub.net, or call 888.709.3939.

River Valley Ranch Golf Club

No attitude, just fantastic golf and food

You are on a trip to the Roaring Fork Valley and want to play golf? Good luck! Demand in this corner of Colorado is higher than Mt. Sopris, and you're likely to spot more celebrities than tee times. But we'll let you in on a little secret: River Valley Ranch is not a private club. You can play it. And you should.

Last August, a group of investors, led by Dale Rands, bought the course for $1.2 million. Over the past several months, they've invested nearly $2 million in renovations and upgrades, with the result that the course is now immaculate and open for play.

"We're creating a gathering place for everyone in the valley to enjoy," says Rands. "Our team knows what makes for a good experience."

In addition to Rands, the team consists of Dave Alvarez and Alden Richards, who direct the golf operation, along with Chris Norvell and Josh Staskauskus who oversee Hattie Thompson, the ranch's restaurant. Norvell, owner of Epicurious Catering, and Staskauskus, formerly of Aspen's Montagna restaurant, have been guiding a total renovation of the kitchen and dining space, including converting the former patio into an eating area that perfectly frames the spectacular scenery just outside.

Mt. Sopris stands with its twin peaks keeping watch over every shot played at RVR. The Crystal River runs pristinely through the course and comes into play on seven holes. Opened in 1996, the par-72 layout designed by Jay Moorish is at once playable and challenging. You don't have to be a bomber to enjoy the shot-making possibilities; generous fairways invite risk-reward decisions.

The par-3 third hole is quintessential River Valley Ranch. From the tips it plays 224 yards and bunkers guard the left. Hit long right and you're lost, hit long left and you're in the drink. A precise shot or a bailout short right are your options. Choose wisely.

RVR reopened for play on April 5th, and the team here knows what you want whether you come from out of town or just down the street. GPS on every cart makes finding yardages simple and play enjoyable. Richards was the longtime director of junior golf in Aspen and he brings that experience to the table. Alvarez, an accomplished teacher and player, was formerly director at the Jim McLean Golf School at PGA West in La Quinta, Calif.

"This is sent from above," Richards says. "Right on the Crystal River, 29 miles from Aspen. It's a dream come true."

You don't want to get caught dreaming on the 623-yard par 5 at No. 17. Forget reaching this one in two and focus on your approach shot. But go ahead and start thinking about after-round appetizers as you finish up on an inviting final hole that doglegs left.

The Hattie Thompson restaurant will offer continental and American fare created by chef Phil House, who was executive chef at Merry Go 'Round in Aspen Highlands for years before coming over to RVR. With a daily happy hour and floor-to-ceiling windows overlooking the course, you can't go wrong stopping by for drinks after golf or staying for dinner and making an evening out of it.

"It's all about the team," says Rands. "Together we have the golf side and the hospitality side covered. We've worked hard to upgrade every aspect of the course since we took over."

Hattie Thompson restaurant

And they have succeeded. So if you're scrambling to find a place to play between wetting your fly line and getting back on your bike, the first place to look is River Valley Ranch. You'll find a course in immaculate condition and a team that delivers exactly what you want: a terrific experience.

So stop celebrity watching and go birdie hunting at RVR.

Ravishing Ravenna

Southern Denver Course Sparks to Life

The sun is rising over the dramatic red rocks of the Golf Club at Ravenna. It's a new dawn — and the view has been worth the wait. The 634-acre private enclave located south of Littleton is enjoying new life, after the economic downturn temporarily slowed home construction in the Denver metropolitan area. Real estate inquiries are now skyrocketing, the Jay Morrish-designed golf course is in prime condition, and members enjoy lively gatherings, feeling lucky they got in early.

River Canyon Real Estate created the original vision for Ravenna after the turn of the millennium, and made it reality in “Our mission is to be mindful of what nature has given us and to uncover, respectfully, the golf course that lies within,” Morrish wrote in his initial notes upon seeing the property.

Elevation changes are first found on the second hole - a monster par 5 that requires three solid shots to reach the green. It starts the ride between challenging par 3s and risk/reward par 4s, all of which put a premium on club selection.

The back nine shoots up, then down, over deep ravines and seemingly calm ponds, with holes named Double Cross, and the Rock. The finishing par-5 18th is the longest on the course. The 2007 with the opening of the course and 243 custom home lots. Situated on a unique piece of property embraced within Waterton Canyon and adjacent to Pike National Forest, the gated community provides owners their own piece of pioneered land. It's one of the last developments with uninterrupted views of the Denver skyline, the Dakota Hogback, forests and wildlife.

“We knew we had something special when we first discovered it,” says owner Glenn Jacks, whose eyes still alight at Ravenna's future. “In a nearly built-out and still growing town, to find virgin land is an anomaly. Our passion for embracing and protecting the natural environment helped us shape its mission.”

It all began with a name that recalls Old-World Italy, with its concrete tile roofs, colorful mosaics, stucco and native wood. The palate ranges from sedate earth tones to vibrant burnt sienna, grass green to ocean blue. Outdoor patios and terraces take advantage of the afternoon sun by day, and provide the warmth of built-in fire pits by night.

This might not feel like Denver at all, if the skyscrapers of the city weren't easily seen from the back nine of what might be Morrish's last creation. If it is his swan song, then he didn't skimp on drama, as fairways rock and roll through craggy outcroppings, native pines and carefully placed water features.

design strategy helped it earn “Best New Course” by Golf Digest and Golfweek upon opening in 2006 and a top-50 “Best Residential Courses” ranking by Golfweek.

In all, six sets of tees grace the par-71 layout, ranging from 5,009 to 7,263 yards. An extensive practice facility includes a 315-yard driving range with seven target bunkers, a large two-tier putting green and short-game area with three practice bunkers. Club operations are managed by Billy Casper Golf, the largest domestic golf course operator.

The clubhouse offers excellent views, with 60 feet of glazed windows to perfectly frame the Front Range. The Pro Shop, member dining and event space can be found here — a nice place to relax after a great round.

The vision will only continue to unfold in the next few years, as a private casting club, vintners club, pool and tennis facilities are built. Jacks wanted it that way — as a place you’d rarely want to leave.

Home Sites — 166 — start in the mid $200,000s and are being sold at a fast clip. Over 30 lots are under contract or reserved. Custom built homes start at 1.1 million. Some of Denver’s most-revered builders have staked a claim here, showcasing hand-laid tile, knotty alder cabinetry, cedar-lined closets and vaulted ceilings. Fuller Sotheby’s International is the official broker, with current listings provided at ravennare.com.

Home ownership is a not a requirement for membership, but provides the best access to club activities that are scheduled weekly. Membership information or rates to host a golf tournament at Ravenna can be requested by contacting Amy Rome at 720.937.7384. For More Information Visit ravennagolf.com.

Bentley GT Speed

The 2014

By Aaron Atwood

Continental GTC Speed Convertible

Bentley engineers an extraordinary vehicle

You could pull three Gs in an F-16 fighter jet and leave the canopy down and still not have the full experience of freedom and power you get from Bentley's new 2014 Continental GTC Speed Convertible.

Long name, muscle to match.

Bentley isn't known as a sports-car maker, so it comes as no surprise that the Speed Convertible isn't a nimble king of cornering. But you'll be surprised when you experience the new suspension Bentley engineered to make the GTC Speed at least handle like a member of the industry royal family. With the suspension lowered nearly half an inch and the frame stiffened, plenty of feel transfers to a relatively light steering column.

As for the soft top, it's as good as any—ever. Quiet, dry and easy to retract, it delivers. With the top up, you'll have virtually the same experience as a hardtop. With the top down, you'll have no problem at speeds in excess of 150 mph. The design of the GTC Speed makes driving with the top down as comfortable as it can be, meaning low wind noise and all the comfort without the confinement of a roof.

It would be easy to overlook the GTC Speed in the category of muscle. Sure, Bentley's always been big, but the GTC Speed takes it to a new level. This is one of the fastest production cars ever made.

The 12-cylinder, W-12 is both massive and efficient. The twin-turbo takes a giant leap up from the base model V-8. The luxury wrapper is deceptive, but inside are 616 horses ready to gallop. That kind of power is rare. In less than 10 seconds you'll find yourself eclipsing 100 mph with enough room in the pedal for another hundred and then some. The 0-60 time? A blink over 4 seconds. Those are high-performance numbers on a 5,000-pound body.

Gas mileage isn't bad either. At cruising speed, you'll get around 20 miles per gallon. Of course in the mountains or pushing it hard, you'll see less as the turbos kick in and start to growl. But oh, the sound of the growl! Choosing the just the right driving mode for your mood may be the most difficult decision with the GTC Speed. In sport mode, you'll find the bass note in the soundtrack instills a sense of aggression. As the speed increases, the rumble turns to a war cry.

The warrior in the GTC Speed has a counterpart that is the interior. That foil is super luxury. Ditto the velvet-soft leather. What's your pleasure? You can truly have it your way by customizing nearly everything in the vehicle. From leather suppleness to seatbelt fabric, it's truly your car. This is where Bentley's coachworks manufacturing is the leading edge of the high-end market.

Summer won't be here forever. The GTC is also great for a winter trip to Tahoe with its all-wheel drive. The 8-speed transmission is at its best when it's unnoticed. You'll hardly realize you're changing gears. Of course, you can manually shift with paddles on the steering wheel, but you'll never do it better than the computer.

"Seamless" is so overused, but it perfectly describes the bodylines on the GTC. Refined and elegant yet muscular, the GTC leans forward enough in the front end to give momentum, while the trunk and back end relax enough to tell onlookers that you aren't in a hurry unless you want to be.

In terms of technology, you'll find it doing just what it should be: helping. From navigation to the stereo system, the touchscreen reads your mind. It knows what you want and gives it to you front and center. Thoughtful add-ons like a neck heater make it possible to drive with the top down year-round.

And while you won't find this on the spec sheet, the Bentley Continental GTC Speed turns heads. The pronounced and familiar B embedded prominently on the grill has deep meaning; the GTC sports nearly a century of history as a model. Bentley represents the most extreme in luxury and performance. Driving one says, "You get it."

At a base price of $240,000, the GTC Speed isn't an impulse buy for most. But hey, it's much less expensive than an F-16.

Make a Splash in Summer

Swimwear

There is a style that's just right for you

Perhaps you've waited just a bit too long to hit the gym before the swimwear season begins. Not to worry. By finding the swimsuit that works with your body type and gives you confidence to drop the wrap and soak up the sun, you can save the post-traumatic stress for next year.

The 2013 summer swimwear trends run the gamut from itsy-bitsy bikinis to vintage suits. But before we talk colors, you should know that it's the style that's going to garner you admirable glances.

In the 1950s, Marilyn Monroe had every woman clamoring to purchase the same style of swimsuit she wore in that famous picture seen around the world. That style is now called vintage, and vintage swimwear is back. The key elements of these suits are shaping and support, perfect for the curvaceous gal who'll look feminine and sexy at the same time. Today's vintage styles offer exactly the right amount of support without looking like a girdle, and they're fun to wear.

Also trending are mismatched bikini tops and bottoms. Matchy-matchy is out in both color and style. Try a bandeau on the top with a high-waisted bottom that will flaunt any curvy shape while highlighting legs and giving them the illusion of length—always a plus.

Monokinis? These are fabulous bathing suits that take the one-piece to daring levels with sexy cutouts. This is one of the hottest trends on the beach and offered by designer labels including Ralph Lauren, Coco Rave and Bleu by Rod Beattie. With cutouts on the sides, the monokini looks like a string bikini from the back while modestly covering up the tummy in front. The great thing is that these suits give women a choice in coverage. Designers offer pieces with moderate to full bottom coverage, and cutouts are strategically placed to allow you to cover the areas you want covered while allowing you to flaunt those you can't wait to show off.

If being the ultimate girly-girl on the beach is for you, then it's all about bows, ruffles and fringe. Strategic placement comes into play in these suits, too. Design elements can hide a lot; however, before buying, take a good look in the mirror to make sure the adornments don't enhance the problem areas you're trying to minimize.

Let's not forget crochet suits, a trend that emerged in Brazil during Sao Paulo's fashion week. This suit works beautifully on its own and as part of the mismatch look—a crochet top with a non-crochet bottom, for example. Crochet monokinis are also all the rage this summer, available in a variety of solid colors.

When it comes to the hottest patterns and colors, it would be easier to say what isn't in. Whether it's a one- or two-piece swimsuit, stripes are hot. For a more slimming appearance, go with vertical. If you want to look larger (as in the bust area), opt for wide horizontal stripes. Black and white is always safe, but bright and colorful tend to get the beach party started.

Wild animal beading continues to be popular, along with shades of copper—an ideal color for less-than-tan bodies. And every designer this season is going floral, from the sweet and flirty look to eye-catching tropical prints that add exotic flare. Digital prints are also all the rage. This year's most popular variations include soft florals, cityscapes and abstract patterns—plenty of options to show off your individuality.

Summer is meant to be fun so forget the annual swimsuit stress. Choose the suit that enhances your best assets, minimizes what you don't want noticed and allows you to express the woman you are. Choose correctly and, regardless of your particular body type, you'll be the hottest girl on the beach or by the pool!

The Healing Power of Jewelry

Here's a sure way to look good and feel good at the same time

Breitling's Chronomat 44 watch

Pura Vida Bracelets

AugustHeart pendant by Roberto Coin

MTV x Caliber Bracelet

We hear the stories, buy the jewelry and don't pay much attention to the message behind the bauble, so on a whim I Googled 'jewelry for a cause.' Within .17 seconds 96,000,000 results popped up offering links to a variety of websites that sell jewelry to raise funds for nonprofits.

In addition to the vast number of results, the search brought up a site that is actually called Jewelry for a Cause. Founded in 2008 by former lawyer and mother of two Jessica Mindich, the concept is unique yet simple: design and create inexpensive yet fashionable pieces of jewelry that can be sold at profit to raise money for various schools and charities. To date, the organization is responsible for over $400,000 of philanthropic dollars to worthy causes, proving that jewelry sparkles in many ways.

One item in particular posted multiple times: the MTV x Caliber bracelet. This bracelet carries the individual serial number of an illegal firearm turned in to the Newark Police Department during a gun buyback program. The Caliber Collection is made, in part, from the steel of reclaimed illegal guns. Priced from $40 to $1,275, its sales have raised money to help the Newark Police Department fund these critical gun buyback programs. jewelryforacause.net

In California, two surf-loving friends from the West Coast and a pair of Costa Rican brothers founded Pura Vida Bracelets. These multicolored, beaded bracelets are sold around the world for as little as $5. Portions from all sales benefit the Surfrider Foundation, which works to protect oceans and beaches. Other Pura Vida designs help raise awareness about autism and breast cancer and support causes such as Surfaid International, Japanese tsunami relief, the Fresh Air Fund and more. puravidabracelets.com

The famous Roberto Coin brand is honored to help high school students combat heart disorders via its exclusive AugustHeart bracelet and pendants, priced from $200 to $980. All of the proceeds go to the AugustHeart program, which Dore and Bart

Koontz launched after the loss of their son to an undiagnosed heart condition called hypertrophic cardiomyopathy. The mission of the program is to make participation in sports safe for high school students by providing free heart screenings to detect potentially life-threatening conditions. augustHeart.org

Els For Autism is the organization Hall-of-Fame golfer Ernie Els founded in honor of his son, who was diagnosed with the disorder. Luxury watchmaker Breitling has created 88 numbered, limited-edition timepieces to benefit the foundation; they're based on Breitling's exceptional Chronomat 44 watch and feature a Caliber 01. The timepiece is available at Roberto Coin stores (roberetocoin.com), and 20 percent of the proceeds will be donated to Els' foundation, which is dedicated to helping children affected by Breitautism. elsforautism.com

If you are still in the mood to help heal lives by buying and wearing jewelry, designer Joan Hornig might have just the right piece for you. "Philanthropy is beautiful" is the motto Hornig lives by. In the 1980s, she started designing jewelry for herself, but a partnership with Bergdorf Goodman allowed her to bring her designs to the masses. By 2003, Hornig's jewelry was helping to support more than 500 charitable organizations around the world by giving 100 percent of the profits from each purchase to the buyer's charity of choice. If your favorite charity is not on the list, simply add it. joanhornig.com

From bracelets for men and rings for women to necklaces and bangles for young ladies, purchasing jewelry has been elevated to a whole new level—the level of healing.

John Travolta is not only an exceptional pilot with over 7,000 flight hours behind him and qualifications on ten different aircraft types. He is also passionately interested in everything embodying the authentic aeronautical spirit – such as Breitling instruments for professionals. On his wrist is a Navitimer chronograph with its famous aviation slide rule, a cult-watch for all devotees of the conquest of the skies, and equipped like all Breitling models with a movement chronometer-certified by the COSC – the highest official benchmark in terms of reliability and precision.
